DAY'S WAR NEWS AT A GLANCE

Paris, Feb. 12.—French captured 300 yards of German trenches in Champagne.. German counter attack repulsed. Sixty five prisoners, one of them an officer, captured.

Berlin—Admitted French penetrated German positions over 200 yards front. Great battle raging in Champagne as well as in Artois.

London—Arrival czar Nicholas at front signal for fresh assaults by Russians against Teuton forces. Russians delivering attacks at three widely separate points on long battle line.

Geneva—Reported Roumania has demanded explanation from Bulgaria of action of Bulgarian troops in crossing Roumanian frontier.

PLOT TO POISON BANQUET GUESTS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Details of a sinister plot by a supposed fanatic, whose inflamed mind impelled him to attempt wholesale murder of the guests at the banquet given Archbishop George W. Mundelein at the University Club Thursday night, were in the hands of the police and club officials today. The 100 prominent guests at the banquet who became violently ill after eating the soup served at the banquet, were all recovered today.

"There is no doubt," said N. J. Doherty, manager of the club, "that the poisoning of the banquet guests was the result of the plot of a single man to kill the hundreds at the tables. We know who the man is and we have found a well equipped laboratory of poisons in his quarters, including hundreds of viàls of deadly poisons of a dozen varieties. We expect his arrest today."

Doherty also said that the literature found in the man's rooms included anarchist propaganda, I. W. W. pamphlets and writings by Emma Goldman. Doherty spoke of the literature as a "library of hate."

He said the receptacles in which the poison was brought to the University Club kitchen were found, only partly emptied. His theory was that the poisoner was interrupted before he completed his plan, and that this accounted for the fact that only part of the guests became ill instead of all of them being killed.

DEMOCRATS SELECT THEIR DELEGATES

Emanuel Metzger of this city and Judson A. Betts of Catskill were selected Friday afternoon by the Democratic congressional committee of the Twenty-seventh congressional district for recommendation to the enrolled Democratic voters of the district to be voted for at the April primaries as district delegates to the national Democratic convention in June.

The alternates selected for recommendation were John D. Lyons of Monticello, Sullivan county, and George A. Parsons of Sharon Springs, Schoharie county.

The meeting of the committee was held at the Stuyvesant Hotel in this city and was attended by the following state committeemen and county chairmen:

Columbia county—Robert Livingston, state committeeman, and William Mallory, county chairman.

Schoharie county—Hon. George M. Palmer, state committeeman, and Isaac Harrington, county chairman.

Sullivan county—Morris Borden, representing Valentine Scheidell, state committeeman, and Sheriff Elmer Winner, representing David Avery, county chairman.

Ulster county—Roscoe Irwin and Arthur V. Hoornbeek, state committeemen, and J. J. McGrath, county chairman.

Resolutions offered by the Hon. George M. Palmer of Schoharie county, endorsing the administration of President Wilson, were adopted.

Hoehing Family Jar.

William Hoehing was arrested on Friday afternoon by Sergeant Hanley on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Hoehing charging her husband with desertion and non-support. The Hoehings have one child and reside at No. 20 West Union street. When Mrs. Hoehing applied to Recorder Lang for a warrant she claimed that her husband gave her no money for the support of herself and child. This morning when Hoehing was arraigned in court he entered a plea of not guilty and asked that the case be adjourned until Tuesday morning so that he could secure his witnesses. Recorder Lang granted the request and set the case down for trial at 9 o'clock that morning. Hoehing is employed as a bartender.

Crown Prince Deposed.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

The Hague, Feb. 12.—Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany has been practically deposed from command of his army corps and will be assigned to nominal command of the German air corps, according to reports from Belgium. This action was taken by the kaiser, the reports state, because the crown prince has manifested incompetence. This information is received here with considerable doubt.

DANCE TO HELP DAY NURSERY

In order to continue its support of the Day Nursery, the Monday Sewing Club will hold a benent dance at the armory on Friday evening, February 25, and every effort will be made to ave it one of the season's memorable social events.

The Day Nursery was established four years ago by the club, and in order to raise funds for the project the club gave a series of tea dances, which were the first dances of their kind held in Kingston. Each year since then the club has given a dance for the benefit of the Day Nursery, and each dance not only has proved successful but has been marked by some unusual feature which made it especially attractive. This year's dance will be no exception to the rule, and a pantomime performance will precede the dance.

History of the Nursery.

The establishment of a Day Nursery was welcomed by mothers who sought employment during the day but were prevented from accepting it because of the care they were required to give their children at home.

The Day Nursery relieved this situation and by caring for the children gave the mothers an opportunity of becoming self supporting. Several times during the first year the club considered discontinuing the nursery because of the lack of funds, but it struggled on bravely and succeeded in meeting all expenses.

The second year found the nursery an established institution and greater public interest was taken in it than had been anticipated. The third year the club found the public still more willing to co-operate, but now in its fourth year the club finds it imperative to seek the assistance of the public spirited citizens and will therefore give a dance, which will be one of the season's social events.

The Work Accomplished.

The Day Nursery is conducted in the Federation House on Hasbrouck avenue, where an average of eleven children are cared for each week day. The children are brought to the nursery by their mothers and begin the day aright with a nourishing breakfast. They have their regular naps, and are well cared for by the nurse employed by the club. Clean clothing, which is made by the members of the club, is supplied to the children, who are well cared for, well fed and well clothed.

The expense of all this work amounts to a considerable sum, and the club makes an appeal to every citizen to aid in the work of the nursery for the coming year by helping to make the benefit ball on February 25 a success in every way. here is little doubt that the appeal will meet with a ready response.

BANKS DIDN'T "STOMP" HER.

Also He Was Right About the Door, So He Is Free.

The question of whether the front door in the apartment house at No. 20 Hurley avenue should remain closed and locked or just closed resulted in Walter Banks being haled before Recorder Lang this morning on the complaint of Mrs. Gilbert Dougherty, who claimed that Walter had threatened to "stomp" on her if she came out in the hallway. Both are tenants in the house.

From the story as brought out the front door is used by Mrs. Dougherty to reach her apartments and also by Mr. Banks to reach his apartments. Mr. Banks boards with Mrs. Brodhead, who was also present in the court room as a witness in behalf of her boarder. The Doughertys said that the door should be not only closed but locked while Mr. Banks and Mrs. Brodhead claimed that they had received notice from the landlord that the door should not be locked but should always be kept closed to keep out the cold. It also developed that Mrs. Brodhead is the only tenant that keeps the hall cleaned out.

After listening to both sides Recorder Lang informed them that he had had a talk with the landord who had told him that he did not expect the tenants to lock the front door but to see that it was kept closed. The court said that he found Banks not guilty and discharged him but he warned both Banks and Mrs. Dougherty that the dove of peace must settle over their apartments and if there was any further trouble he would place both parties under bonds to keep the peace.

WILSON MEDITATES ON BOARD YACHT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Definite decision on pressing matters of international moment will be reached by President Wilson well away from outside influences. He was cruising on the lower reaches of the Potomac river today in the Mayflower. Before him were recommendations by Secretary of State Lansing dealing with the following:

Granting the German prize Appam asylum at Norfolk until the end of the war and making her immune from legal process by the British government to recover the vessel.

That the development of the submarine warfare warrants the United States in reversing its decision that mechantmen shall not carry guns for any purpose.

In addition the president had a wealth of confidential information dealing with the British trade controversy and the allied interference with American mails on which he was expected to plan a course of action.

There is no attempt to disguise the concern with which officials view the announcement by the Teutonic allies that they will, commencing on March 1, resume their submarine campaigns against all vessels carrying arms either for offense or defense. The complete text of the German note was enroute from Berlin but Secretary Lansing furnished the president with the summary sent by Ambassador Gerard which was received yesterday. Because of the brief interval before this new course of action is begun this government must act immediately in determining on its plans. Secretary Lansing is understood to believe that merchant vessels should be unarmed.

The suggestion before the president is that a ruling be made that will prohibit vessels receiving clearance from American ports that mount cannon. The situation is very embarrassing. A reversal of policy at this time will bring sharp protests from Great Britain and her allies. Yet the German announcement is simply an acceptance of the suggestions initiated at the state department and intended to settle instead of complicate the submarine situation. Officials declined to forecast what the president's decision in the matter will be.

JONES BOY COMMITTED.

Chronic Runaway and Trouble Maker Sent to Randall's Island.

Harvey Jones, 14 years old, was committed to Randall's Island this morning by Recorder Lang at the request of Harvey's father, Hiram Jones, of Locust avenue. The lad has caused his family considerable trouble for the past year or so, which finally led the father to take the step of requesting that the boy be sent away.

Several days ago Harvey was brought before the recorder by his stepmother and at that time the boy was warned that he would have to behave or he would be sent away. He was placed on probation and left the city hall with his stepmother. Later that day he ran away from home and was not found until Friday evening, when he attempted to attend the movies at the Casino on Broadway and was recognized by Policeman Kuehn, who took him to police headquarters, where the boy's father later came and took him home.

The boy had got on a West Shore train at the depot and rode as far as Newburgh, where the conductor put him off as he had no ticket. He was sent back on another train to this city. Instead of going home he attempted to use the nickel some one had given him for carfare to visit the show.

The boy has run away from home before and the father said this morning that he could do nothing with him and thought it was best for the boy to have him sent to some reform school.

Fire in Bags of Feed.

Spontaneous combustion in some bags of feed stored in the old blacksmith shop of the Remington plant on Grand street caused an alarm of fire to be rung in about one o'clock this morning from box 116. The fire was extinguished with the chemicals and the loss by fire will not exceed $25. Since the warehouse of Matthews & Harrison was burned down the firm has been using this blacksmith shop, which faces TenBroeck avenue, for a temperary store house.

Gov. Hall of Louisiana and Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Commissioner of the east, watching the races at New Orleans.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

For some time the high school students have been anticipating the organization of the Junior Cass with considerable interest, and Friday afternoon at the close of school they met and elected their officers. Russel Dana was chosen by the student council to act as chairman until the election of the president. When he opened the nominations for that office the names of Dana, Irving Smith, Edward Stelle and William Winston were mentioned, and seconded. Stelle was elected, but by no means had a walk away as the votes were quite evenly distributed, and Dana received 18 votes to his 21. Miss Ester Rodie was next elected vice president, and election was greeted with the hearty applause of all the class. Dana and Kenneth Van Oostenbrugge tied for the office of secretary, but when the vote was taken a second time, excluding the other candidates, Van Oostenbrugge received the majority. Next Miss Josephine Schmid received the election as treasurer, and Mr. Moulton said a few words concerning the finances of the class, telling them that in accordance with the ruling of the faculty there would be no dues levied by the class.

The senior ball held Friday night was a huge success, and a large number of young people were present in spite of the stormy weather. The dancing started about a quarter of nine and wrapped up in the excellent music of Muller's orchestra the dancers allowed no time to go wasted, and were somewhat sorry that there had to be the short intermission at 10:30. The dance broke up about 1 o'clock. The gymnasium was in gala attire, maroon and white streamers being strung from the girders and many pennants adorning the walls of the hall. The pretty gowns of the dancers intermingled with the decorations presented a pretty picture. Those present were the Misses Margaret Risely, Ruth Draffin, Helen Wood, Helen Connelly, Helen Diamond, Katherine Pehle, man, Elsie Grant, Edith Tongue, Ethel Rose, Dorothy Leighton, Marion Way, Marion Dick, Ruth Deegan, Agnes Dorsey, Jane Hogeboom, Mary Donovan, Viva Volk, Susan Cockburn, Freda Maize, Rae Wolf, Ruth Ashley, Ella Lepine, Nina Shultis, Anna Roach, Marguerite Dolson, Margaret Angle, Pearl Osterhoudt, and Bernard McBride, Mr. Voight, Fred VanEtten, Frank Campbell, James Dwyer, Thomas Dwyer, Joseph Hazen, Sahler Hornbeck, Edward Stelle, Harry Frey, Calvin Winne, Fred Snyder, Kenneth Sullivan, Ray Van Buren, Roger Gibson, Simond Snyder, LeRoy Port, John Church, LeRoy Gill, Louis Campbell, Augustus Brinnier, Stanley Gregory, Samuel Peyer, Reginald Case, Sidney Wolf, Edward Hillis, Raymond Smith and Alfred Schmid. The chaperones were members of the school faculty, Mrs. Witter, Miss Walton, Miss Parker and Mr. Moulton.

The Needs of Poland.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Amsterdam, Feb. 12.—That $1,000,000 monthly will be needed to provide adequate relief for the inhabitants of Poland is the assertion in an article republished here from the North German Gazette, official organ of the Berlin government. It states that Messrs. Whitney and Walcott of the Belgian relief committee and the Rockefeller Institute, respectively, have completed an investigation and reported that smaller funds will not be adequate.

A STEEL CABINET FOR WATER BOARD

Real tape and not red tape was in evidence Friday afternoon at the meeting of the Board of Water Commissioners at city hall where measurements were taken for the installation of a steel cabinet. John Spencer, a salesman for the Safe Cabinet Company of Marietta, Ohio, submitted some plans.

At present some of the valuable maps and records of the water department are filed away in wooden cupboards and are difficult to get at as well. On motion of Commissioner W. R. Harrison, it was decided to have Superintendent John H. Harrison and Assistant Secretary Abernethy take measurements and then the commission will order a cabinet sufficient to meet requirements.

One of the recently added machines in the office is an addressograph operated by motor power. A practical demonstration of this time-saving device was given by Bookkeeper Leroy Cashin for the benefit of the commissioners present.

President John Hauck and Commissioners W. R. Harrison and Palmer Canfield were present. In addition to routine business and approval of bills, Assistant Secretary Abernethy reported $21,429.07 on hand in the general and special fund. The latter fund amounts to $507. There will be payable in interest on bonds April 1st the sum of $10,000 and $24,000 on principal June 1.

With the receipts for March estimated at a little more than $20,000 the water board expects that it will be able to meet these obligations and running expenses of $2,000 a month without difficulty in spite of the expenditures of the past year which were in the neighborhood of $40,000 for extensions.

The commissioners talked over the purchase of sulphate of alumina for the filtration plant as a necessity at this time in view of a rising market for many chemicals. The purchasing committee was authorized to obtain prices on the sulphate as well as upon other supplies.

Clifton Avenue's "Kid Mills."

Thursday seems to have been a bad day for school children as in addition to the antics of "Kid Mills," the New York would-be terror, a local man broke out and assaulted three boys on their way to school. Two of them came home with their clothing badly torn and disinterested adults who saw the assault say it was unprovoked, although the "Kid Mills" of Clifton avenue denies that he even touched the boys.

Hardly a Truthful James.

Jmes Lane, the 14-year-old lad who told the Middletown police that he had been abandoned by his father in that city, is now found to be a runaway from the State School at Industry. An agent from the latter place is coming for James, who is said to have taken $4.17 from an employer for his trip to Orange county. James asserted that his home was in High Falls.

Appointment for Gen. Wiley.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Feb. 12.—State Excise Commissioner George E. Green today announced the appointment of General William S. C. Wiley of Catskill as property clerk and purchasing agent. It takes effect February 16.

BETHANY CHAPEL MAKING PROGRESS

Bethany Chapel occupies a unique place in the moral and religious forces of this city. The real "power behind the throne" has been three elect ladies, the Misses Forsyth, Shufeldt and Van Leuven. Only the last one remains, the others having been called to their reward.

The late William Smith, of precious memory for years, looked after all the services and after his work was finished the Rev. V. D. Mattice preached for several years and the late Lambert J. DuBois was superintendent of the Sunday school. Since his death Ernest E. Deyo has had charge of the Sunday school.

Four years ago the Rev. J. J. Dean became the pastor, serving until he left town a few months ago, when the Rev. Mr. Mattice again took up the work.

Of late the services on both Sunday and Friday nights have become more evangelistic and a goodly number of persons have been seeking pardon from sin, and it looks as if much good might be accomplished here.

May Decide by Monday.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 12.—President Wilson's decision as to who will be the new secretary of war is expected to be answered on Monday when he returns from a week end trip on the Mayflower with Mrs. Wilson. It is understood that he is anxious that his new cabinet member shall qualify immediately because General Hugh Scott, the acting secretary, holds decidedly strong views favoring compulsory military service in opposition to those of the president.

Activity at Watervliet Arsenal.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Feb. 12.—An increased force of skilled mechanics is working night and day at the Watervliet arsenal and will be employed in this manner for several months on account of urgent orders for completion of heavy guns for the army and navy. At present the men are working on twenty 16-inch guns. It will require five months to finish these guns.

REVIVAL CLOSES SUNDAY EVENING

"Shut-ins" Will be Brought Out in Automobiles to Attend—Address Friday Evening Was by Dr. Leeper.

(Official Report.)

The inclement weather did not prevent twelve hundred people from coming to the union revival service in the St. James M. E. Church Friday evening, but on the contrary lent enthusiasm to the audience. Their singing and attentiveness made it possible for the speakers to deliver their best in eloquence, in forceful, energetic appeal.

Six delegations were present totaling one hundred and fifty. First the Hart Dry Goods Company; second, Washington Post, P. O. S. of A.; third, Washington Post, P. O. D of A.; fourth, the Salvation Army; fifth, Miss Montanye's Sunday school class, and sixth, the Helping Hand Society.

The delegation for Sunday evening will be the "shut-ins," who will be brought in automobiles. That evening will be the last the Messrs. Mullar and Meridith will spend in Kingston; it will be their farewell. They alone are to have charge of the service, which means the best in song and speech. There will be a larger choir, and three hundred extra chairs for the congregation. No one should miss this.

Dr. Leeper, of the First Reformed Church, brought the message of the evening, which colored as it was, by several beautiful poems, the life meditations of certain great men, helped the audience to see truths in a stronger light. "Tonight," said the speaker, "it is not a question of making the sick man well, but how to make a dead man alive. The natural, unregenerated man is dead, but the Christian, if he is a Christian, lives. 'God so loved the world that he gave His only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' Christ came to give the dead man life. God says we are to believe in Christ and have life. You love and believe your father and mother, and it is easy to believe a personality, but it is a wonderful things to believe in Jesus Christ. You can never be in heaven until your will is there too. God gave salvation. He did not sell it. I wonder if you know if you are saved or not. Shame on him that believes in Jesus Christ, who has known Him for years, and yet does not serve Him. It is not a question of knowledge. It is a question of good; a question of believing. In John, the fourteenth chapter, the last part of the second verse, He says, 'I go to prepare a place for you.' The wonderful thing about this is that the Master shall prepare a place for you, His servants. You know the method of preparation with us is, that we have the servants do the preparing. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister to you. There are some things which the Master can only prepare. We have seen the seasons in preparation many times, can we prepare summer or winter? It is a glorious thing to find Jesus Christ everywhere working for His people. He is praying for us now. We are the only people he has created in his own image; the people who he has redeemed with His own body. He prepares a place for you so that you may be where He is. He said, 'I am the vine, and you are the branches,' We are the people of God, we are to work for him.

"Martin Luther said, 'I would rather be in hell with Christ than in heaven without Him.' Do you know if you get a vision of the place prepared for you, you will get the greatest inspiration you ever got in your life. If you get an idea of this place waiting for you, you will be a changed man. It will be a wonderful place; a place worthy of the Master. This place is for those whom He has redeemed by His blood and sanctified by His spirit. It is the Father's pleasure to give you this kingdom. What kind of a place does He prepare for those who reject Him? It is the place for the devil and his angels. Yet God knows that at the last moment man says, 'God be merciful to me, a sinner.' God gives a glad welcome to His good and faithful servants."

"Certainly," said Mr. Tullar, "I am glad to know Jesus the carpenter's son, is going to prepare a place for me. It will be well built. I do not care to over estimate the value of these meetings in Kingston, but from what I see and hear, they are helping everyone. Let us take an inventory tonight." It was found that everyone in the congregation had received a blessing; and that two hundred thought they had received the greatest blessing of all. Each of the two hundred was given a chance to tell in a few words their idea of that blessing. The amount and value of spiritual help told of was wonderful.

"If God prepares a place for you, that does not mean He furnishes the material. How much have you sent up?"

Notice.

Meeting Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the St. James Church for the general public. Mr. Tullar will speak on a topic which, he says, will surprise all. There will be a larger choir and increased seating capacity for the people.

The Work Accomplished.

The Day Nursery is conducted in the Federation House on Hasbrouck avenue, where an average of eleven children are cared for each week day. The children are brought to the nursery by their mothers and begin the day aright with a nourishing breakfast. They have their regular naps, and are well cared for by the nurse employed by the club. Clean clothing, which is made by the members of the club, is supplied to the children, who are well cared for, well fed and well clothed.

The expense of all this work amounts to a considerable sum, and the club makes an appeal to every citizen to aid in the work of the nursery for the coming year by helping to make the benefit ball on February 25 a success in every way. here is little doubt that the appeal will meet with a ready response.

BANKS DIDN'T "STOMP" HER.

Also He Was Right About the Door, So He Is Free.

The question of whether the front door in the apartment house at No. 20 Hurley avenue should remain closed and locked or just closed resulted in Walter Banks being haled before Recorder Lang this morning on the complaint of Mrs. Gilbert Dougherty, who claimed that Walter had threatened to "stomp" on her if she came out in the hallway. Both are tenants in the house.

From the story as brought out the front door is used by Mrs. Dougherty to reach her apartments and also by Mr. Banks to reach his apartments. Mr. Banks boards with Mrs. Brodhead, who was also present in the court room as a witness in behalf of her boarder. The Doughertys said that the door should be not only closed but locked while Mr. Banks and Mrs. Brodhead claimed that they had received notice from the landlord that the door should not be locked but should always be kept closed to keep out the cold. It also developed that Mrs. Brodhead is the only tenant that keeps the hall cleaned out.

After listening to both sides Recorder Lang informed them that he had had a talk with the landord who had told him that he did not expect the tenants to lock the front door but to see that it was kept closed. The court said that he found Banks not guilty and discharged him but he warned both Banks and Mrs. Dougherty that the dove of peace must settle over their apartments and if there was any further trouble he would place both parties under bonds to keep the peace.

WILSON MEDITATES ON BOARD YACHT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Definite decision on pressing matters of international moment will be reached by President Wilson well away from outside influences. He was cruising on the lower reaches of the Potomac river today in the Mayflower. Before him were recommendations by Secretary of State Lansing dealing with the following:

Granting the German prize Appam asylum at Norfolk until the end of the war and making her immune from legal process by the British government to recover the vessel.

That the development of the submarine warfare warrants the United States in reversing its decision that mechantmen shall not carry guns for any purpose.

In addition the president had a wealth of confidential information dealing with the British trade controversy and the allied interference with American mails on which he was expected to plan a course of action.

There is no attempt to disguise the concern with which officials view the announcement by the Teutonic allies that they will, commencing on March 1, resume their submarine campaigns against all vessels carrying arms either for offense or defense. The complete text of the German note was enroute from Berlin but Secretary Lansing furnished the president with the summary sent by Ambassador Gerard which was received yesterday. Because of the brief interval before this new course of action is begun this government must act immediately in determining on its plans. Secretary Lansing is understood to believe that merchant vessels should be unarmed.

The suggestion before the president is that a ruling be made that will prohibit vessels receiving clearance from American ports that mount cannon. The situation is very embarrassing. A reversal of policy at this time will bring sharp protests from Great Britain and her allies. Yet the German announcement is simply an acceptance of the suggestions initiated at the state department and intended to settle instead of complicate the submarine situation. Officials declined to forecast what the president's decision in the matter will be.

JONES BOY COMMITTED.

Harvey Jones, 14 years old, was committed to Randall's Island this morning by Recorder Lang at the request of Harvey's father, Hiram Jones, of Locust avenue. The lad has caused his family considerable trouble for the past year or so, which finally led the father to take the step of requesting that the boy be sent away.

Several days ago Harvey was brought before the recorder by his stepmother and at that time the boy was warned that he would have to behave or he would be sent away. He was placed on probation and left the city hall with his stepmother. Later that day he ran away from home and was not found until Friday evening, when he attempted to attend the movies at the Casino on Broadway and was recognized by Policeman Kuehn, who took him to police headquarters, where the boy's father later came and took him home.

The boy had got on a West Shore train at the depot and rode as far as Newburgh, where the conductor put him off as he had no ticket. He was sent back on another train to this city. Instead of going home he attempted to use the nickel some one had given him for carfare to visit the show.

The boy has run away from home before and the father said this morning that he could do nothing with him and thought it was best for the boy to have him sent to some reform school.

Fire in Bags of Feed.

Spontaneous combustion in some bags of feed stored in the old blacksmith shop of the Remington plant on Grand street caused an alarm of fire to be rung in about one o'clock this morning from box 116. The fire was extinguished with the chemicals and the loss by fire will not exceed $25. Since the warehouse of Matthews & Harrison was turned down the firm has been using this blacksmith shop, which faces TenBroeck avenue, for a temperary store house.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

For some time the high school students have been anticipating the organization of the Junior Cass with considerable interest, and Friday afternoon at the close of school they met and elected their officers. Philip Dana was chosen by the student council to act as chairman until the election of the president. When he opened the nominations for that office the names of Dana, Irving Smith, Edward Stelle and William Winston were mentioned, and seconded. Stelle was elected, but by no means had a walk away as the votes were quite evenly distributed, and Dana received 18 votes to his 21. Miss Ester Rodie was next elected vice president, and election was greeted with the hearty applause of all the class. Dana and Kenneth Van Oostenbrugge tied for the office of secretary, but when the vote was taken a second time, excluding the other candidates, Van Oostenbrugge received the majority. Next Miss Josephine Schmid received the election as treasurer, and Mr. Moulton said a few words concerning the finances of the class, telling them that in accordance with the ruling of the faculty there would be no dues levied by the class.

The senior ball held Friday night was a huge success, and a large number of young people were present in spite of the stormy weather. The dancing started about a quarter of nine and wrapped up in the excellent music of Muller's orchestra the dancers allowed no time to go wasted, and were somewhat sorry that there had to be the short intermission at 10:30. The dance broke up about 1 o'clock. The gymnasium was in gala attire, maroon and white streamers being strung from the girders and many pennants adorning the walls of the hall. The pretty gowns of the dancers intermingled with the decorations presented a pretty picture. Those present were the Misses Margaret Risely, Ruth Draffin, Helen Wood, Helen Connelly, Helen Diamond, Katherine Pehle, man, Elsie Grant, Edith Tongue, Ethel Rose, Dorothy Leighton, Marion Way, Marion Dick, Ruth Deegan, Agnes Dorsey, Jane Hogeboom, Mary Donovan, Viva Volk, Susan Cockburn, Freda Maize, Rae Wolf, Ruth Ashley, Ella Lepine, Nina Shultis, Anna Roach, Marguerite Dolson, Margaret Angle, Pearl Osterhoudt, and Bernard McBride, Mr. Voight, Fred VanEtten, Frank Campbell, James Dwyer, Thomas Dwyer, Joseph Hazen, Sahler Hornbeck, Edward Stelle, Harry Frey, Calvin Winne, Fred Snyder, Kenneth Sullivan, Ray Van Buren, Roger Gibson, Simond Snyder, LeRoy Port, John Church, LeRoy Gill, Louis Campbell, Augustus Brianier, Stanley Gregory, Samuel Peyer, Reginald Case, Sidney Wolf, Edward Hillis, Raymond Smith and Alfred Schmid. The chaperones were members of the school faculty, Mrs. Witter, Miss Walton, Miss Parker and Mr. Moulton.

The Needs of Poland.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Amsterdam, Feb. 12.—That $1,000,000 monthly will be needed to provide adequate relief for the inhabitants of Poland is the assertion in an article republished here from the North German Gazette, official organ of the Berlin government. It states that Messrs. Whitney and Walcott of the Belgian relief committee and the Rockefeller Institute, respectively, have completed an investigation and reported that smaller funds will not be adequate.

A STEEL CABINET FOR WATER BOARD

Real tape and not red tape was in evidence Friday afternoon at the meeting of the Board of Water Commissioners at city hall where measurements were taken for the installation of a steel cabinet. John Spencer, a salesman for the Safe Cabinet Company of Marietta, Ohio, submitted some plans.

At present some of the valuable maps and records of the water department are filed away in wooden cupboards and are difficult to get at as well. On motion of Commissioner W. R. Harrison, it was decided to have Superintendent John H. Harrison and Assistant Secretary Abernethy take measurements and then the commission will order a cabinet sufficient to meet requirements.

One of the recently added machines in the office is an addressograph operated by motor power. A practical demonstration of this time-saving device was given by Bookkeeper Leroy Cashin for the benefit of the commissioners present.

President John Hauck and Commissioners W. R. Harrison and Palmer Canfield were present. In addition to routine business and approval of bills, Assistant Secretary Abernethy reported $21,429.07 on hand in the general and special fund. The latter fund amounts to $507. There will be payable in interest on bonds April 1st the sum of $10,000 and $24,000 on principal June 1.

With the receipts for March estimated at a little more than $20,000 the water board expects that it will be able to meet these obligations and running expenses of $2,000 a month without difficulty in spite of the expenditures of the past year which were in the neighborhood of $40,000 for extensions.

The commissioners talked over the purchase of sulphate of alumina for the filtration plant as a necessity at this time in view of a rising market for many chemicals. The purchasing committee was authorized to obtain prices on the sulphate as well as upon other supplies.

Clifton Avenue's "Kid Mills."

Thursday seems to have been a bad day for school children as in addition to the antics of "Kid Mills," the New York would-be terror, a local man broke out and assaulted three boys on their way to school. Two of them came home with their clothing badly torn and disinterested adults who saw the assault say it was unprovoked, although the "Kid Mills" of Clifton avenue denies that he even touched the boys.

Hardly a Truthful James.

James Lane, the 14-year-old lad who told the Middletown police that he had been abandoned by his father in that city, is now found to be a runaway from the State School at Industry. An agent from the latter place is coming for James, who is said to have taken $4.17 from an employer for his trip to Orange county. James asserted that his home was in High Falls.

Appointment for Gen. Wiley.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Feb. 12.—State Excise Commissioner George E. Green today announced the appointment of General William S. C. Wiley of Catskill as property clerk and purchasing agent. It takes effect February 16.

Bethany Chapel occupies a unique place in the moral and religious forces of this city. The real "power behind the throne" has been three elect ladies, the Misses Forsyth, Shufeldt and Van Leuven. Only the last one remains, the others having been called to their reward.

The late William Smith, of precious memory for years, looked after all the services and after his work was finished the Rev. V. D. Mattice preached for several years and the late Lambert J. DuBois was superintendent of the Sunday school. Since his death Ernest E. Deyo has had charge of the Sunday school.

Four years ago the Rev. J. J. Dean became the pastor, serving until he left town a few months ago, when the Rev Mr. Mattice again took up the work.

Of late the services on both Sunday and Friday nights have become more evangelistic and a goodly number of persons have been seeking pardon from sin, and it looks as if much good might be accomplished here.

May Decide by Monday.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 12.—President Wilson's decision as to who will be the new secretary of war is expected to be answered on Monday when he returns from a week end trip on the Mayflower with Mrs. Wilson. It is understood that he is anxious that his new cabinet member shall qualify immediately because General Hugh Scott, the acting secretary, holds decidedly strong views favoring compulsory military service in opposition to those of the president.

Activity at Watervliet Arsenal.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Feb. 12.—An increased force of skilled mechanics is working night and day at the Watervliet arsenal and will be employed in this manner for several months on account of urgent orders for completion of heavy guns for the army and navy. At present the men are working on twenty 16-inch guns It will require five months to finish these guns.

REVIVAL CLOSES SUNDAY EVENING

"Shut-ins" Will be Brought Out in Automobiles to Attend—Address Friday Evening Was by Dr. Leeper.

(Official Report.)

The inclement weather did not prevent twelve hundred people from coming to the union revival service in the St. James M. E. Church Friday evening, but on the contrary lent enthusiasm to the audience. Their singing and attentiveness made it possible for the speakers to deliver their best in eloquence, in forceful, energetic appeal.

Six delegations were present totaling one hundred and fifty. First the Hart Dry Goods Company; second, Washington Post, P. O. S. of A.; third, Washington Post, P. O. D of A.; fourth, the Salvation Army; fifth, Miss Montanye's Sunday school class, and sixth, the Helping Hand Society.

The delegation for Sunday evening will be the "shut-ins," who will be brought in automobiles. That evening will be the last the Messrs. Mullar and Meridith will spend in Kingston; it will be their farewell. They alone are to have charge of the service, which means the best in song and speech. There will be a larger choir, and three hundred extra chairs for the congregation. No one should miss this.

Dr. Leeper, of the First Reformed Church, brought the message of the evening, which colored as it was, by several beautiful poems, the life meditations of certain great men, helped the audience to see truths in a stronger light. "Tonight," said the speaker, "it is not a question of making the sick man well, but how to make a dead man alive. The natural, unregenerated man is dead, but the Christian, if he is a Christian, lives. 'God so loved the world that he gave His only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' Christ came to give the dead man life. God says we are to believe in Christ and have life. You love and believe your father and mother, and it is easy to believe a personality, but it is a wonderful things to believe in Jesus Christ. You can never be in heaven until your will is there too. God gave salvation. He did not sell it I wonder if you know if you are saved or not. Shame on him that believes in Jesus Christ, who has known Him for years, and yet does not serve Him. It is not a question of knowledge. It is a question of good; a question of believing. In John, the fourteenth chapter, the last part of the second verse, He says, 'I go to prepare a place for you.' The wonderful thing about this is that the Master shall prepare a place for you, His servants. You know the method of preparation with us is, that we have the servants do the preparing. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister to you. There are some things which the Master can only prepare. We have seen the seasons in preparation many times, can we prepare summer or winter? It is a glorious thing to find Jesus Christ everywhere working for His people. He is praying for us now. We are the only people he has created in his own image; the people who he has redeemed with His own body. He prepares a place for you so that you may be where He is. He said, 'I am the vine, and you are the branches,' We are the people of God, we are to work for him.

"Martin Luther said, 'I would rather be in hell with Christ than in heaven without Him.' Do you know if you get a vision of the place prepared for you, you will get the greatest inspiration you ever got in your life. If you get an idea of this place waiting for you, you will be a changed man. It will be a wonderful place; a place worthy of the Master. This place is for those whom He has redeemed by His blood and sanctified by His spirit. It is the Father's pleasure to give you this kingdom. What kind of a place does He prepare for those who reject Him? It is the place for the devil and his angels. Yet God knows that at the last moment man says, 'God be merciful to me, a sinner.' God gives a glad welcome to His good and faithful servants."

"Certainly," said Mr. Tullar, "I am glad to know Jesus the carpenter's son, is going to prepare a place for me. It will be well built. I do not care to over estimate the value of these meetings in Kingston, but from what I see and hear, they are helping everyone. Let us take an inventory tonight." It was found that everyone in the congregation had received a blessing; and that two hundred thought they had received the greatest blessing of all. Each of the two hundred was given a chance to tell in a few words their idea of that blessing. The amount and value of spiritual help told of was wonderful.

"If God prepares a place for you, that does not mean He furnishes the material. How much have you sent up?"

Notice.

Meeting Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the St. James Church for the general public. Mr. Tullar will speak on a topic which, he says, will surprise all. There will be a larger choir and increased seating capacity for the people.

INSTALLATION OF PASTOR MOOT

The installation of the Rev. F. W. Moot as pastor of the Ponckhockie Union Church will take place on Tuesday evening, February 15. The program includes a sermon by the Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D., of New York; an address to the congregation by the Rev. M. O. Van Keuren of Schenectady; a charge to the pastor by the Rev. Charles S. Hager of Albany. The Rev. R. S. Smith of Poughkeepsie and Charles W. Shelton, D. D., superintendent of the New York congregational conference, will also participate in the services. A special musical program has been arranged. The public is cordially invited.

This church was organized November 7 and already has a membership of 109, nearly one-half of whom were never before identified with any church. The church has quickened the religious life of the community and the new pastor is greeted with large audiences. He will reside after April 1 at 39 Grove street.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1523—A Trim and Becoming Model—Ladies' Apron With or Without Trimming and Belt.

Figured percale in blue and white, with facings of white linene, was used for this style. The facings may be omitted. The apron is cut in kimono style, and may be made with or without the belt. The style is also good for chambray, gingham, lawn, drill, linene, sateen or alpaca. The pattern is cut in three sizes: Small, medium and large. It requires 6¾ yards of 36 inch material for a medium size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipts of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

It is better to misplace our charity on nine unworthy persons than to deny alms to one that is really in need.

In natures as in seas, depth answers unto depth.—Dickens.

EGGLESS DISHES.

With eggs soaring higher and higher these days we must of necessity curtail their use, and yet the family must have the sweet things and be supplied with a variety. A most delicious pudding, which needs long, slow baking, is this:

Rice Pudding.—Take a fourth of a cupful of rice, a half cupful of sugar and two quarts of rich milk with a half cupful of raisins or a few sliced sweet apples, put into a baking dish and set into the oven. Stir often for the first hour or two, then let it brown. Bake for three hours. This is delicious without sauce, but a hard sauce flavored with nutmeg makes it a dessert liked especially by the children and is a most wholesome one for them.

Molasses Cookies.—Take a cupful of shortening, a cupful of molasses and a cupful of brown sugar. Heat in a saucepan until well mixed, then add ginger or other spices to taste, a half teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little hot water and flour enough to roll out. If the mixture is cooled well before rolling it will handle better.

Apple Sauce Cake.—Take a cupful of brown sugar, a half cupful of shortening, a cupful of unsweetened apple sauce, made from cooking apples, a cupful of raisins, chopped, two teaspoonfuls of cocoa, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a half teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg, two cupfuls of flour, sifted with a half teaspoonful of soda, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake forty minutes in a shallow pan. This makes a good dessert served with a lemon sauce or any desired flavor.

Winter Shortcake.—Prepare a rich baking-powder biscuit dough; make two cakes, rolling thin, spread one with butter and place the other on top, then when baked they are easily split without making them heavy. Use canned peaches, sliced oranges, or bananas or any fruit desired. Serve with cream and sugar.

This same biscuit dough rolled thin, sprinkled with brown sugar and nuts, rolled, then cut like cinnamon rolls and baked are delicious little cakes for tea.

The Sun in Winter.

In winter we are 3,000,000 miles nearer the sun than in summer. Some may think that if this statement is true we ought to have warmer weather in winter than in summer, but it must be remembered that the heat we receive from the sun depends very much upon the direction of its rays. In summer the sun's rays are more vertical than in winter; hence the days are warmer.

Seeing Around Corners.

There are many insects which have a very much larger field of vision than we have. This is due to the greater concavity of their eyes, enabling them to see around the corner, so to speak, behind and at the sides. This development in man would have its objectionable points, but also its good ones, not the least of which might be the detection of pickpockets.—Chambers' Journal.

Freezing Water.

Water contracts until it is reduced to 40 degrees and then expands till it freezes. The expansion of frozen water is because the ice crystals fit less closely than the particles of water did. Nine cubic inches of water will become, when frozen, ten cubic inches of ice.

HIGH SCHOOL LOST SAUGERTIES GAME

After four months of athletic victories with no defeats to interrupt the good work of all the teams of the school, the basketball five were forced to swallow a bitter pill Friday night at Saugerties when the high school team of that village, insignificant so far as athletics are concerned, nosed out the home boys by the score of 37 to 35, the game being played in the high school gymnasium.

Of course, the winning streak of the teams hailing from our high school had to be broken at some time but to have the Saugerties team do the trick smarts, especially since they were sadly outclassed in the first game of the season by the score of 49 to 9. Five straight victories until last night made the path of the home basketballers very rosy indeed but now the thistles seem to be sprouting. Although it will be mighty hard to display a grin in the face of this little misfortune, the high school lads are resolved to do so, grit their teeth and do better the next time. Kingston grit would not allow it to be otherwise.

Up in that pretty little Saugerties burg a youth named Peters is poring over the text books in the high school, playing basketball as a little diversion. Evidently he took the indoor sport extra seriously last night, to take a peep at the score, which shows that he tallied a total of 22 points, a remarkable score to run up against the fast Kingston team. But for him, the playing of the Saugertiesians would have been very poor indeed. Now the residents of that burg are thinking seriously of giving him a political job as a reward for last night's work.

But there was another big factor in the victory for Saugerties. The rules according to which the game was played were a blending of amateur and professional but so far from either that it was the opinion of the locals that the main job of the referee was to call a foul on Kingston whenever there was danger of one of the maroon and white players scoring a basket. 32 fouls were called on Kingston while the Saugerties clan was penalized 12 times. According to this, the winners must have felt chagrined every time they happened to bump one of their opponents and were very gentle in their actions. Saugerties made 11 of them good while Kingston, through the remarkable eye of Joyce, scored 9 of the fouls called. This advantage of 2 measly points won the game for Saugerties. That Peters gentleman seems to be the guilty person, The Freeman thinks.

The contest was very fast all the way through and the good basket shooting of both teams made the game mighty interesting from the spectators' standpoint. At half time, both sides retired with the count at 18 all.

The score and reports of the game show that Joyce played the best game for the home boys. His floor work was fast and snappy throughout and his score for the evening was 16 points, nearly half the total. Kiernan also fought a good battle.

Saugerties Maidens Perform.

As a preliminary attraction, the girls of the sophomore and senior classes of the high school played a game in the inter-class contest of the school. The sophomores walloped the staid seniors 25 to 6. Perhaps the eyesight of the Kingston team was dazzled by the beauty of the school girls and that contributed to their defeat. Peters had his eyes closed during this game.

About 200 people witnessed the battle and dancing followed the game. The home boys were so goldarned disgusted with the whole night's affair that they would not stay over night and returned home last night. The score:

The Jeweler's Experiment

A middle western city was chosen for the try-out, and within a week a large number of new dealers had been secured.

The jewelers knew that the article was good. They knew that as soon as the advertising appeared in the newspapers, demand would be knocking at their store doors.

They were quick to act as self interste dictted.

Newspaper advertising not only stimulates consumer demand, but it rouses the dealer to quick co-operation.

Definite facts on this subject have been compiled under the heading, "The Dealer and His Friends," which will be sent on request by the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York.

COLONIAL CAR JUMPS THE TRACKS

East bound Car No. 13 of the Kingston Consolidated Railway Company celebrated Lincoln's birthday this morning by jumping the tracks down the Strand, bending one of the steel street poles nearly double and giving the crew and the four passengers the thrill of their lives. Had it not been for the pole which bore the brunt of the attack, the car and occupants might have gone into the cement factory slip with disastrous consequences. Net casualties were confined to a wrecked vestibule and pole with broken guy wires and the thrills aforementioned.

The accident accurred at about 10:30 o'clock. The car was moving along at about 15 miles an hour when the wheels left the rails at the curve west of the coal shed of the Newark Lime and Cement Company and shot forward on the snow fully forty feet into the steel pole which was nearly bent into an exact quarter circle in the space of two seconds.

Motorman Fred Hauser had no time to jump but was thrown from the car just before it struck the pole and rolled over and over, going clear of the wheels by less than a foot. Fred Lahl who was clearing the walk of snow at this point, thought Hauser must be caught under his car so narrow was the margin of safety.

Conductor James Dunn and the passengers went to the floor when the car struck the pole but all escaped without serious injury. John Rice, employed at the Schoonmaker ice house, Kingston Point, and John Kuhns were among the passengers, all of whom went on their way rejoicing that it was no worse.

Considerable time was taken in putting the car back on the rails but after the jacks had done their work, No. 13 was able to proceed under its own power. The right hand side of the vestibule roof was badly smashed up and the side of the car was splintered. Not any glass was broken although the impact was hard enough to twist the trolley pole almost flat on the ground.

It was said that one of the crew of the damaged car figured in an almost similar derailment ten years ago just a few feet east of this point.

The Chenoworth Baronetcy

It Was Lost and Was Revived

By F. A. MITCHEL

When James Chenoworth, having lost both father and mother, decided to sell the homestead and go abroad for awhile he sat himself down to examine a large number of papers that had been accumulating for many years. Indeed, there were documents among them that dated back more than two centuries. There was a tradition in the family that the first Chenoworth in America had been a soldier of King Charles under Prince Rupert and, when the Protector Cromwell prevailed, had come to America to make a new home for himself.

The family documents were kept in what was called a hair trunk, from being covered with the skin of some animal from which the hair had not been removed. James Chenoworth spent many hours over the contents of the trunk, reading the papers. In time he took up a paper which he unfolded. It was a fragment yellow with age. The ink was also faded and almost illegible. James put it in his pocket, intending to try to decipher it later, for words in it which he could easily read seemed to refer to his ancestors. What he ultimately made out was this:

"At the beginning of the parliamentary wars James Chenoworth, son and heir of Sir Ralph Chenoworth, out to fight for the king. His Arthur, two years his the parliamentary forces. brothers were enough At the end of the war having been lost, went to America. his home and When the Chenoworth James. worth Cheno

Chenoworth resolved that during his travels he would visit England and hunt up his ancestral record. Placing the fragment in his portemonnaie, he made his preparations and in due time went abroad. At a hotel in Switzerland, where he found a mixture of English and Americans, he fell in with an English family named Smithson.

The main attraction in this family was Miss Gladys Smithson, a girl about twenty years old. Both she and Chenoworth were fond of winter sports, and they were where they could enjoy them to perfection. Miss Smithson was the only child of her parents, and Chenoworth learned that through her mother she was an heiress. Since he possessed an income of barely $2,000 a year, he repressed any desire he felt to make love to the young lady.

This was fortunate, for Miss Smithson's mother, who had an interest in her daughter's adding to rather than dividing her prospective fortune, not suspecting that there was any especial interest between the two young persons, made no objection to their being together, and when they separated she invited Chenoworth when he came to England to call upon them at their home in that country.

Perhaps neither Chenoworth nor Miss Smithson realized the delicate bond that had been slowly forming between them till the moment of separation came. Gladys gave him her hand at parting, and he held it just a trifle longer than at an adieu between mere friends. Miss Smithson looked at the floor. Chenoworth looked into her face, then released her hand and turned away.

He met many young women on his travels, but none of them caused him to banish from a spot very near to his heart the image of Miss Smithson. He had planned a trip to Russia, but, bearing in his memory the image of his companion in Switzerland, he shrank from a visit to that cold country and resolved to forego the trip and give himself more time in England.

When Chenoworth arrived in London he sent his card to the Smithsons at their ancestral home in the county of Kent, with the result that he received an invitation to visit them for a week end. As he was driven into the place between two imposing gateway pillars and up to the manor house, through an avenue arched with trees that had been hundreds of years growing, his heart sank within him, for he realized that an American with a beggarly two thousand a year could never aspire to the hand of the girl who would inherit such a splendid home.

Whether Mrs. Smithson had discovered in her daughter a disposition to pine for Chenoworth and scented danger, certain it is that the mother received him without the cordiality he expected. Her daughter, on the contrary, welcomed him with a mingling of pleasure and embarrassment. During his brief visit there were moments of exquisite pleasure for both him and Gladys, succeeded by moments of depression. There was a union of hearts, but they were constantly reminded that any other union was impossible.

When Chenoworth was making this visit, one afternoon while Gladys was engaged, he was entertained by her mother. He mentioned the fact that his ancestors had come from England and his discovery of the fragment among his family papers. The lady was doing some kind of knitting while he was talking to her, on which she kept her eyes, but Chenoworth noticed that as he passed from one point to another she was becoming deeply interested. Finally she asked abruptly to see the fragment to which he had referred. Taking it from his portemonnaie, he handed it to her.

For some time her eyes were bent upon it, while the American's were bent upon her. Evidently there was something in this bit of yellow paper, torn in half, that moved her profoundly. She handed it back to him without remark, but he noticed a slight tremor of her hand as she did so. Presently, evidently nerving herself to something, she asked:

"Mr. Chenoworth, do you intend to look up your ancestry while in England?"

She awaited his reply with suppressed emotion.

"That is my intention," he replied. "But I don't know where to begin."

There was no reply to this. Later Miss Smithson reappeared, and the two young persons went out into the grounds together.

Chenoworth was to return to London the next morning. What was his surprise before going to bed to be asked by Mrs. Smithson to remain longer. He replied that nothing stood in the way of his doing so, and his departure was deferred. Mrs. Smithson's treatment of him seemed to be undergoing a change, though she did not seem to have made up her mind with regard to his attentions to her daughter. On the second day after her interview with him during which he had showed her the fragment she asked him to let her see it again. He did so, and she asked him if he would object to giving her a copy of it. He at once complied with her request.

The next day Mrs. Smithson announced that she must go to London to do some shopping. She charged her daughter to take good care of the guest during her absence, which was entirely unnecessary, for it was evident that Miss Gladys was as much enamored of Chenoworth as he was with her. The lovers were in a seventh heaven during the mother's absence, which lasted several days.

Chenoworth was puzzled. Why did Mrs. Smithson leave him with her daughter during this interval? Why had she changed in her treatment of him? There was no explanation. On her return the mystery deepened. She would not hear of Chenoworth's departure, saying that she was planning some social functions at which she desired his presence.

Chenoworth was beside himself. His attentions to Gladys were very noticeable, and her mother was encouraging them. She had no information concerning his standing in America nor as to his income, which, it was evident from his careful expenditures, was not large. Why, then, was she giving him every opportunity to win her daughter when that daughter might make a very advantageous match?

Chenoworth was anxious to hunt up the records of his ancestry, and he realized that to do this he must go to London. Gladys had told him that he had better go to an office of heraldry. But whenever he proposed to depart Mrs. Smithson objected, and he deferred his going.

And so it was that Chenoworth kept putting off his departure until one evening, while out on the terrace with Gladys, under the moonlight, he told her that he loved her, but he knew that owing to his limited means a marriage with her was impossible.

Then they conferred together upon what Mrs. Smithson meant by encouraging this match, but as neither of them knew they simply wondered. It was finally agreed between them that Chenoworth should learn what was in store for them by asking for Glady's hand.

He approached Mr. Smithson with doubt and fear. He was given to understand that if he was acceptable to the daughter he would be acceptable to the parents. This thrilled him, and he went to Gladys with the good news at once. At a subsequent interview he gave Mr. Smithson a statement of his financial affairs, to which the gentleman listened with respectful attention, but made no comment. If Chenoworth's mind had not been taken up with love, curiosity would have come in to claim its share of attention.

Chenoworth did not leave the manor house till he departed on his wedding journey. When he returned he was saluted by his mother-in-law and every one else as Sir James. When the first excitement attending the couple's return had worn off Chenoworth was informed of what had been going on during his courtship.

Mrs. Smithson had inherited her estate through the female branch of Chenoworths. She was aware that the heir to the title had two centuries before disappeared in America. On receipt of a copy of Chenoworth's fragment she had taken it to a herald office in London, and they had given her the following reading of it when complete:

"At the beginning of the parliamentary wars James Chenoworth, son and heir of Sir Ralph Chenoworth, went out to fight for the king. His brother, Arthur, two years his junior, joined the parliamentary forces. The two brothers were enough alike to be twins. At the end of the war, the king's cause having been lost, James Chenoworth went to America. Arthur returned to his home and succeeded to the title. When the restoration came James Chenoworth had died, leaving a son, John. The sons of James Chenoworth are the rightful heirs to the Chenoworth title and estates."

Mrs. Smithson's action was explained. By taking James Chenoworth for a son-in-law she revived the baronetcy and secured for her daughter the estates which were legally his.

HARVARD IS WEAK IN SPORTS

Harvard, strong in football, track athletics, baseball, rowing and hockey, the major sports (hockey is a major sport at Harvard), makes a poor showing in several of the so-called minor sports, such as swimming, gymnastics, wrestling and basket ball, healthful, worth while forms of competition.

Proficiency at swimming has gone ahead fast in recent years at several colleges, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Penn and College of the City of New York, for instance. Doubtless this is due to those institutions having fine pools, and maybe the backwardness of Harvard in this line of intercollegiate sport is due to shortage of facilities.

EGGLESS DISHES.

With eggs soaring higher and higher these days we must of necessity curtail their use, and yet the family must have the sweet things and be supplied with a variety. A most delicious pudding, which needs long, slow baking, is this:

Rice Pudding.—Take a fourth of a cupful of rice, a half cupful of sugar and two quarts of rich milk with a half cupful of raisins or a few sliced sweet apples, put into a baking dish and set into the oven. Stir often for the first hour or two, then let it brown. Bake for three hours This is delicious without sauce, but a hard sauce flavored with nutmeg makes it a dessert liked especially by the children and is a most wholesome one for them.

Molasses Cookies.—Take a cupful of shortening, a cupful of molasses and a cupful of brown sugar. Heat in a saucepan until well mixed, then add ginger or other spices to taste, a half teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little hot water and flour enough to roll out. If the mixture is cooled well before rolling it will handle better.

Apple Sauce Cake.—Take a cupful of brown sugar, a half cupful of shortening, a cupful of unsweetened apple sauce, made from cooking apples, a cupful of raisins, chopped, two teaspoonfuls of cocoa, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a half teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg, two cupfuls of flour, sifted with a half teaspoonful of soda, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake forty minutes in a shallow pan. This makes a good dessert served with a lemon sauce or any desired flavor.

Winter Shortcake.—Prepare a rich baking-powder biscuit dough; make two cakes, rolling thin, spread one with butter and place the other on top, then when baked they are easily split without making them heavy. Use canned peaches, sliced oranges, or bananas or any fruit desired. Serve with cream and sugar.

This same biscuit dough rolled thin, sprinkled with brown sugar and nuts, rolled, then cut like cinnamon rolls and baked are delicious little cakes for tea.

The Sun in Winter.

In winter we are 3,000,000 miles nearer the sun than in summer. Some may think that if this statement is true we ought to have warmer weather in winter than in summer, but it must be remembered that the heat we receive from the sun depends very much upon the direction of its rays In summer the sun's rays are more vertical than in winter; hence the days are warmer.

Seeing Around Corners.

There are many insects which have a very much larger field of vision than we have. This is due to the greater concavity of their eyes, enabling them to see around the corner, so to speak, behind and at the sides. This development in man would have its objectionable points, but also its good ones, not the least of which might be the detection of pickpockets.—Chambers' Journal.

Freezing Water.

Water contracts until it is reduced to 40 degrees and then expands till it freezes. The expansion of frozen water is because the ice crystals fit less closely than the particles of water did. Nine cubic inches of water will become, when frozen, ten cubic inches of ice.

KINGSTON, N. Y., FEB. 12, 1916.

The courage manifested in changing one's position in public life is exceeded only by the consequences of such action. In the case of President Wilson and Secretary of War Garrison, the latter could not equal the mental agility of his superior in shifting front to meet the demands of party leaders in Congress and so took advantage of the only other alternative and quit the cabinet. The Hay policy of utilizing the State militia in providing a larger army, with which the President has been flirting, is the rock upon which these administration principals split. The consequence is a situation for which the political resources of the administration are manifestly unprepared. Secretary Garrison stood firmly by his proposition for the continental army plan, a proposition toward which the President appeared to lean in his speeches in New York only last month. On the eve of strengthening that position in a speech before the business men of the country, the War Secretary found himself in hopeless opposition to the President and tendered the resignation that seems destined to make history for the year 1916.

Reading between the lines of the correspondence leading up to the resignation, the singular lack of unity in the cabinet over the Baltimore platform is again conspicuously displayed and the break on the Philippine question is hardly second in importance to that on national defense. Both are sure to be leading issues in the campaign this year and the divergence of opinion thereon among Democratic leaders is generally reflected among the rank and file, to say nothing of militarist and pacifist factions in Congress. The country's faith in the professions of the President that he favors a larger standing army will be shaken as a result of Mr. Garrison's retirement. The refusal of the latter to bow to the demands of expediency and go back upon a policy to which he believed the President, in part at least, committed, shows the former Secretary to be the man of independence and judgment that he has been credited with being. It also indicates Democratic disintegration upon a policy of adequate preparedness, credit and responsibility for which, it now appears, can only be assumed by the Republican minority in Congress.

George W. Perkins, who, as a self constituted regulator of human activities and events, is a gratuitous source of much interesting advice, intimated to the faculty of Vassar College at a dinner the other night that colleges are ten years behind the times. He referred to the advances made in the business and social world within the last decade and suggested the possibility that similar changes had not followed in educational circles where methods of ten years ago might still be in use. Save for that he might just as well have said twenty years. Mr. Perkins is probably accurate in his generalization. Yet it must have been a great temptation to some of the college professors present to extend the discussion to politics where Mr. Perkins shines so preeminently. Here Mr. Perkins stands, steadfast to an ideal of more than a decade ago and his constancy in this respect is more hidebound than any devotion of educators to oldtime notions. What is sauce for the Vassar faculty is sauce for the trustees. Mr. Perkins is one of the latter, a fact which may have saved him from comparisons in the field of progress, in politics as well as education.

If stories of soldiers returning from the front in France are to be believed, and these have the merit of being uncensored, the prime requisite of modern military science is the ability of infantry privates to wield a shovel. We are told that the "rest period," or the time in which soldiers are not engaged in the first line trenches, is devoted almost entirely to digging other trenches. A concrete instance of no small value is thus afforded the United States, especially in these piping time of preparation. The military instruction problem, just now so acute in educational circles, could be solved by the simple expedient of placing shovels in the hands of pupils and on such mornings as this well cleared sidewalks would be in evidence. Meantime the young men would be getting a training in the most practical phase of warfare. In Spring and Summer, these courses could be transferred to farm and garden, or even to public works such as completion of the barge canal. The only trouble with this system of drill is that its very simplicity and usefulness would undoubtedly preclude its adoption in the face of more involved methods advanced by military and other experts.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Crawford—"The janitor of our flat is going to give some kind of an entertainment." "Crabshaw—"For your sake, I hope it will be a housewarming."—Judge.

Sapleigh—"I believe, you know, I shall try a fish diet for my brain." Miss Keen—"Don't be absurd, Mr. Sapleigh. Fish may stimulate brains, it cannot create them."—Boston Transcript.

"Telephone, sir." "What is it?" "Your wife wants you home at once." "What's the trouble?" "She has a tight gown, can't stoop, and the drip pan under the refrigerator is running over."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"How's prohibition working in Crimson Gulch." "Changed the architecture of the whole town," replied Three-Finger Sam. "A lot o' business houses is bein' built with nothin' but back doors to 'em."—Washington Star.

"Jaggers must be a devoted husband. He told me his wife met with an accident and that he was worried sick for fear she should attempt to be active with her injury too soon." "What was her injury?" "She dislocated her jaw."—Baltimore American.

How it Happened.

Under the able superintendence of the twentieth-century builder, cottages and houses sprang up like mushrooms upon the new estate. But one morning the foreman rushed into his employer's office in a state of intense excitement.

"Please, sir," he gasped, "one of the new houses has fallen down in the night."

"What?" roared the builder. "You mean to tell me that one of my new well built, desirable villa residents has come to grief? How the dickens did that happen?"

"Well, sir," explained the foreman, "as far as I can make out, there was a little mistake. Unfortunately the men took down the scaffolding before they had put up the wall paper."—Tit-Bits.

Nothing More, Then.

A man was walking along the street and he saw a house on fire. He rushed across the way and rang the bell. After some time, a woman, who had proved to be slightly deaf, appeared at the door.

"Madam, your house is on fire."

"What did you say?"

The man began dancing up and down. He pointed above. "I said your house is afire! Flames bursting out! No time to lose!"

"What did you say?"

"House afire! Quick!"

The lady smiled. "Is that all?" she said sweetly.

"Well," replied the man hopelessly, "that's all I can think of just now."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Asking a Great Deal.

The wife of a clergyman in the northern part of Scotland, whose violent antipathy toward his mother-in-law was well known throughout the community, was seriously ill; so seriously, in fact, it was expected that she would not live another 24 hours.

After being told she must soon leave this world, she called her husband to the bedside and spoke her last wishes. To each request concerning the manner of conducther funeral, the description of her tombstone and the location of her grave, the minister replied solemnly. "Yes, Janie, I'll do that," until she arrived at her last request.

"And promise me, Angus, that ye'll ride in the first carriage with mother, and that ye'll treat her right kindly and affectionately on the ride."

"Weel, Janie, seein' as ye ask me, I'll dae it, but I tell ye nae, it'll spoil the day for me."—New York Tribune.

It Wins Them.

Gil Anderson, winner of the Astor cup, said at an automobilists' banquet in New York:

"There is nothing more showy and attractive than skillful automobile driving. In fact, I heard the other day about a foreign lady of title who has just jilted one of the Kaiser's most successful generals in order to elope with a Weehawken chauffeur who can drive a sixty-horsepower car with one hand and roll a cigarette with the other!"

Cure Seemed Efficacious.

In a city boarding house some time ago the guests were working away at the evening meal when Mr. Jones broke through the din of clattering knives and forks.

"I was reading of a new cure this morning," he remarked, glancing around the table. "It seems that you take off your shoes and stockings and walk barefooted—"

"What do you think of that cure, Mr. Jones?" eagerly interrupted the landlady, who had also read the story. "Do you really think that walking barefooted through grass will make one strong and healthy?"

"Well," smiled Mr. Jones, strenuously trying to cut a piece of meat, "it seems to have made this beef pretty tough."—Chicago Herald.

There Is Still Hope.

"There," said the artist, throwing down his brush and stepping back from the easel. "I consider that the very best thing I ever did." "Never mind," said his friend consolingly. "Perhaps the critics will take a more charitable view of your other stuff."

SCHOOL CHILDREN HEAR MR. TULLAR

Friday afternoon at three-thirty o'clock six hundred people, mostly school children, welcomed Grant Tullar in the large auditorium of the St. James M. E. Church. It was certainly a surprise to see so large a number on a snowy day. The heart of every child and older person present was pleased when the speaker promised to teach them a song about "a loaf of bread." Through different questions as to what bread was made of; what flour came from; who ground the wheat; how the rain and sunshine grew the grain with God's help; the children literally had the substance of the song in prose. So that when the rythmatic form was given, they immediately understood and recited it.

"Back of the loaf the snowy flour,
Back of the flour the mill;
Back of the mill the wheat and shower,
The sun and the Father's will."

Mr. Tullar spoke about "The Boy Without a Fist." Said Mr. Tullar. Your fist consists of the fingers, thumb and hand. You use it to fight with, but you must not fight other boys. Fight life's battles with it."

With the assistance of one of the boys, whose hand was used as a model, the speaker traced on the blackboard the hand with fingers extended.

"The little finger we will use to denote 'play.' When you play, play fair, and you will play fair when you get older. The next finger means 'work.' The average boy or girl likes to work, to do useful things. The middle finger designates 'right.' The index finger, 'study,' and the thumb, 'love.'

"Work and study are almost alike to some boys and girls. Now from this day everyone do your very best in study. Do the right thing.

"The thumb is used to help the other fingers grip, to make them useful; and since the thumb means 'love,' you can easily see that play, work, right and study, can be nothing without love. Love helps us to reach out and grip. Love is what prompted the Father to do what he did, as told in John three, sixteen: 'For God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

WOMAN'S PRAYER MEETING.

Good Attendance in Spite of Storm on Friday Afternoon.

In spite of the stormy afternoon Friday, a large number of ladies assembled in the chapel of the First Reformed Church for prayer service.

The meeting opened with song and prayer, and was conducted, to use Mr. Tullar's words, in an "unusual way," making each taought, each appeal and each desire to do the right thing for others and for yourself, a matter of instinct. These expressions of supplication were interwoven more firmly into our spirits by several solos, sung at just the right moment by Miss Harris.

Mrs. Elsie Pultz was the speaker at the meeting and because of the ladies' meeting, chose a topic featuring a "social function," the time in Bible history when Jesus visited the home of Mary and Martha. As you remember, Martha left her sister to make all the preparations for this noted guest, while she talked with Him.

The thoughts brought out were that all can help Him by attending to our duties. Everything is appreciated. We can bring wholesomeness into our lives, our conversation, our books and our amusements. He will decide what is right, if we ask Him; thus we can act as force with others, compelling imitation.

A Suspicious Old Resident.

Editor of The Freeman:

I have read with great interest the articles appearing in The Freeman, in regard to the great milk agitation. It has always been my privilege, as an American citizen and a resident taxpayer, to have my milk as I wished to have it.

In this age of specializing, I am quite alert in appreciating this "tempest in a teapot." The untenable position that our municipal office holders strive to assume in this matter, leads me to question, are they not working in close harmony with certain private interests.

In order to keep your hands from being parboiled when you have to provide hot compresses for the invalid, run two long wooden rods into slots stitched in the ends of the flannel or linen compresses. Rest these sticks on the top of the pan of boiling water and when it is time to apply the compress it is easily wrung by twisting the sticks in opposite directions.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT
TO THE PEOPLE OF KINGSTON

We believe we should publicly express our appreciation of the prompt and flattering response of many of our citizens and business men of this city, to our efforts in producing a pure and higher grade of milk, cream, butter, ice cream and cheese. We are already assured that our generous expenditure in enlarging our plant and installing the latest and best purifying and pasteurizing apparatus that can be obtained, will be justified by the new business that is already coming to us.

There is no better argument for the pasteurizing of milk in this city than the present epidemic of typhoid fever that our health officer reports he has traced to the raw milk supplied by one of the local milk dealers.

Dr. Herman N. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, has declared over and over again that raw milk is not safe to consume, and that all milk should be properly pasteurized before it is sold.

Not only milk, but our other products, such as cream, butter, ice cream, etc., are to be properly pasteurized, a better grade made, with its purity guaranteed, and no increase in the price. We wish the consumer to fully understand he is dealing directly with the producer.

Twice a week we are shipping to New York city a large consignment of sweet, unsalted butter, that stands next to Borden's pasteurized butter, now selling for 47 cents a pound. When ours is pasteuried, we believe it will be better than the Borden product.

The sale of our butter (both sweet and salted,) our health-giving buttermilk and cream cheese has increased over 100 per cent in the past two weeks. Nearly every grocery store handles our products. If you cannot secure them of your grocer call "The Creamery" on the telephone, 788, and we will promptly deliver to you absolutely pure, fresh, sweet food products by special delivery.

Our regular milk and cream routes cover all parts of the city. We will be pleased to deliver to you every day.

THERE Was a Time When "Just As Goods" Talk Was Believed But Not Now.

No more business for substituting dealers, because successful dealers in every line of business are keenly alive to supplying the wants of customers.

Hence, successful dealers have banished from their stores all imitations and "Just as Goods."

Only articles of genuine worth, backed by the manufacturers' guarantee, can have a place in their stores.

When you want soap, perfume, household medicine, paint, varnish, automobile tires, food products, chewing gum, corsets, underwear, shirts, collars, shoes, hair tonic, tooth paste or powders, grape juice or soda fountain drinks, etc.—whatever you want, ASK FOR IT BY NAME of manufacturer or trade-mark brand, and the successful dealer will always hand it out without argument.

Remember, in purchasing goods, always ask for them by Maker's name or Trade Mark Brand. You will be sure to "Get What You Ask For" at the stores of successful dealers.

Beer Long a Popular Drink.

Beer is believed to be one of the most ancient of drinks. Manuscripts written at least 3,000 years before the Christian era show conclusively that even at that primitive period the manufacture of an intoxicating liquor from barley or other grain was extensively carried on in Europe.

GEN. SIR H. SMITH-DORRIEN.

AGAIN QUITS COMMAND.

London, Feb. 12.—Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, ex-Boer leader, has been designated to command the British forces operating against the Germans in East Africa, succeeding Gen. Sir Horace Lockwood Smith-Dorrien.

The new commander assumes the rank of temporary lieutenant-general. He has been minister of the interior, mines and defence of the union of South Africa.

Smith-Dorrien, according to the official announcement, has relinquished command owing to ill health. Up to June last he had been in command of the British second army in Flanders.

It can be stated on excellent authority that the illness which has necessitated the recall of Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien is a recurrence of the nervous breakdown which forced the general last June to leave his command on the French front. The strain of the campaign in France from the Mons to the Marne and the trench warfare of Flanders told so severely on Smith-Dorrien that it became advisable early in the summer to give him a complete rest. Friends who saw him in England say that the cheery soldier had become a morose and silent man who spent his time in lonely walks about his estate avoiding all intercourse with his neighbors. The quiet and rest seemed to have restored him to his usual cheery vigor, and it was the conviction that his normal health had returned that caused him to report to the war office for duty. It was thought that the new field for action in Africa would prevent a possible relapse, but this hope seemed not to have been justified.

LYONSVILLE.

Lyonsville, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Ellsworth Davis has returned to her home after spending a week with her son at Cooks Falls.

HIGH SCHOOL LOST SAUGERTIES GAME

After four months of athletic victories with no defeats to interrupt the good work of all the teams of the school, the basketball five were forced to swallow a bitter pill Friday night at Saugerties when the high school team of that village, insignificant so far as athletics are concerned, nosed out the home boys by the score of 37 to 35, the game being played in the high school gymnasium.

Of course, the winning streak of the teams hailing from our high school had to be broken at some time but to have the Saugerties team do the trick smarts, especially since they were sadly outclassed in the first game of the season by the score of 49 to 9. Five straight victories until last night made the path of the home basketballers very rosy indeed but now the thistles seem to be sprouting. Although it will be mighty hard to display a grin in the face of this little misfortune, the high school lads are resolved to do so, grit their teeth and do better the next time. Kingston grit would not allow it to be otherwise.

Up in that pretty little Saugerties burg a youth named Peters is poring over the text books in the high school, playing basketball as a little diversion. Evidently he took the indoor sport extra seriously last night, to take a peep at the score, which shows that he tallied a total of 22 points, a remarkable score to run up against the fast Kingston team. But for him, the playing of the Saugertiesians would have been very poor indeed. Now the residents of that burg are thinking seriously of giving him a political job as a reward for last night's work.

But there was another big factor in the victory for Saugerties The rules according to which the game was played were a blending of amateur and professional but so far from either that it was the opinion of the locals that the main job of the referee was to call a foul on Kingston whenever there was danger of one of the maroon and white players scoring a basket. 32 fouls were called on Kingston while the Saugerties clan was penalized 12 times. According to this, the winners must have felt chagrined every time they happened to bump one of their opponents and were very gentle in their actions. Saugerties made 11 of them good while Kingston, through the remarkable eye of Joyce, scored 9 of the fouls called. This advantage of 2 measly points won the game for Saugerties. That Peters gentleman seems to be the guilty person, The Freeman thinks.

The contest was very fast all the way through and the good basket shooting of both teams made the game mighty interesting from the start. At half time both sides retired with the count at 18 all.

The score and reports of the game show that Joyce played the best game for the home boys. His floor work was fast and snappy throughout and his score for the evening was 16 points, nearly half the total. Kiernan also fought a good battle.

Saugerties Maidens Perform.

As a preliminary attraction, the girls of the sophomore and senior classes of the high school played a game in the inter-class contest of the school The sophomores walloped the staid seniors 25 to 6. Perhaps the eyesight of the Kingston team was dazzled by the beauty of the school girls and that contributed to their defeat. Peters had his eyes closed during this game.

About 200 people witnessed the battle and dancing followed the game The home boys were so goldarned disgusted with the whole night's affair that they would not stay over night and returned home last night. The score:

Games Played This Afternoon.

While the girls' team of the school were playing the Middletown five in the high school gymnasium this afternoon, the Midgets of the school were out on one of their championship hunting trips, this time to Catskill, for the first out of town game of the year. In Catskill they played the Midgets from the Boy Scouts of the Y. M. C. A. The boys had not brought the returns of their contest at the time of going to press.

The Jeweler's Experiment

A middle western city was chosen for the try out, and within a week a large number of new dealers had been secured.

The dealers knew that the article was good. They knew that as soon as the advertising appeared in the newspapers, demand would be knocking at their store doors.

They were quick to act as self interest dicted

Definite facts on this subject have been compiled under the heading, "The Dealer and His Friends," which will be sent on request by the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York.

COLONIAL CAR JUMPS THE TRACKS

East bound Car No. 13 of the Kingston Consolidated Railway Company celebrated Lincoln's birthday this morning by jumping the tracks down the Strand, bending one of the steel street poles nearly double and giving the crew and the four passengers the thrill of their lives. Had it not been for the pole which bore the brunt of the attack, the car and occupants might have gone into the cement factory slip with disastrous consequences. Not casualties were confined to a wrecked vestibule and pole with broken guy wires and the thrills aforementioned.

The accident occurred at about 10:30 o'clock. The car was moving along at about 15 miles an hour when the wheels left the rails at the curve west of the coal shed of the Newark Lime and Cement Company and shot forward on the snow fully forty feet into the steel pole which was nearly bent into an exact quarter circle in the space of two seconds.

Motorman Fred Hauser had no time to jump but was thrown from the car just before it struck the pole and rolled over and over, going clear of the wheels by less than a foot. Fred Lahl who was clearing the walk of snow at this point, thought Hauser must be caught under his car so narrow was the margin of safety

Conductor James Dunn and the passengers went to the floor when the car struck the pole but all escaped without serious injury. John Rice, employed at the Schoonmaker ice house, Kingston Point, and John Kuhns were among the passengers, all of whom went on their way rejoicing that it was no worse.

Considerable time was taken in putting the car back on the rails but after the jacks had done their work, No. 13 was able to proceed under its own power. The right hand side of the vestibule roof was badly smashed up and the side of the car was splintered. Not any glass was broken although the impact was hard enough to twist the trolley pole almost flat on the ground.

It was said that one of the crew of the damaged car figured in an almost similar derailment ten years ago just a few feet east of this point.

Opening of Navigation.

The uncertainty of weather conditions at the present time has changed the plans of the Central Hudson Steamboat Company regarding opening up navigation between New York and Kingston. Their intention was to have a steamer leave New York for this city on Monday, the 14th, but it will probably be Wednesday the 16th before they are able to put a boat through.

Artificial Sausage Skins.

A German butcher has recently patented in this country a process for making artificial sausage skins from fibers of animal sinews. According to the inventor these fibers, which may be purchased very cheaply from abattoirs, may be cleaned more thoroughly than the intestinal skin. The sinews are digestible, and it will do no harm if pieces of the skin are swallowed.—Popular Science Monthly.

CALIFORNIAN SUFFERS 80 WOUNDS IN WAR.

San Francisco, Feb. 12.—Elmer C. Goldsworthy, one of California's crack tennis players and all around athlete, has returned home from the European war suffering from eighty separate wounds. Goldsworthy was in one of the Allied advance trenches when a German grenade exploded in his vicinity. All the other members of his squad were immediately killed. He will live but will be maimed for life.

Promised Not to Repeat.

There are more good stories to the square inch in Doctor Macnamara's book on "Schoolroom Humor" than in any other book of its kind, says an exchange. One section is devoted to unconsciously humorous letters from fathers and mothers excusing their boys' nonattendance at school. Perhaps the best of all is the following from a mother to the teacher: "Please sur, Jonnie was kep home today. I have had twins. It sha'n't occur again.—Yours truely——"

The Chenoworth Baronetcy

It Was Lost and Was Revived

By F. A. MITCHEL

When James Chenoworth, having lost both father and mother, decided to sell the homestead and go abroad for awhile he sat himself down to examine a large number of papers that had been accumulating for many years. Indeed, there were documents among them that dated back more than two centuries. There was a tradition in the family that the first Chenoworth in America had been a soldier of King Charles under Prince Rupert and, when the Protector Cromwell prevailed, had come to America to make a new home for himself.

The family documents were kept in what was called a hair trunk, from being covered with the skin of some animal from which the hair had not been removed. James Chenoworth spent many hours over the contents of the trunk, reading the papers. In time he took up a paper which he unfolded. It was a fragment yellow with age. The ink was also faded and almost illegible James put it in his pocket, intending to try to decipher it later, for words in it which he could easily read seemed to refer to his ancestors What he ultimately made out was this:

Chenoworth resolved that during his travels he would visit England and hunt up his ancestral record Placing the fragment in his portemonnaie, he made his preparations and in due time went abroad. At a hotel in Switzerland, where he found a mixture of English and Americans, he fell in with an English family named Smithson.

The main attraction in this family was Miss Gladys Smithson a girl about twenty years old Both she and Chenoworth were fond of winter sports, and they were where they could enjoy them to perfection. Miss Smithson was the only child of her parents, and Chenoworth learned that through her mother she was an heiress. Since he possessed an income of barely $2,000 a year, he repressed any desire he felt to make love to the young lady.

This was fortunate, for Miss Smithson's mother, who had an interest in her daughter's adding to rather than dividing her prospective fortune, not suspecting that there was any especial interest between the two young persons, made no objection to their being together, and when they separated she invited Chenoworth when he came to England to call upon them at their home in that country.

Perhaps neither Chenoworth nor Miss Smithson realized the delicate bond that had been slowly forming between them till the moment of separation came. Gladys gave him her hand at parting, and he held it just a trifle longer than at an adieu between mere friends. Miss Smithson looked at the floor. Chenoworth looked into her face, then released her hand and turned away.

He met many young women on his travels, but none of them caused him to banish from a spot very near to his heart the image of Miss Smithson. He had planned a trip to Russia, but, bearing in his memory the image of his companion in Switzerland, he shrank from a visit to that cold country and resolved to forego the trip and give himself more time in England.

When Chenoworth arrived in London he sent his card to the Smithsons at their ancestral home in the county of Kent, with the result that he received an invitation to visit them for a week end. As he was driven into the place between two imposing gateway pillars and up to the manor house, through an avenue arched with trees that had been hundreds of years growing, his heart sank within him, for he realized that an American with a beggarly two thousand a year could never aspire to the hand of the girl who would inherit such a splendid home.

Whether Mrs. Smithson had discovered in her daughter a disposition to pine for Chenoworth and scented danger, certain it is that the mother received him without the cordiality he expected. Her daughter, on the contrary, welcomed him with a mingling of pleasure and embarrassment. During his brief visit there were moments of exquisite pleasure for both him and Gladys, succeeded by moments of depression. There was a union of hearts, but they were constantly reminded that any other union was impossible.

When Chenoworth was making this visit, one afternoon while Gladys was engaged, he was entertained by her mother. He mentioned the fact that his ancestors had come from England and his discovery of the fragment among his family papers. The lady was doing some kind of knitting while he was talking to her, on which she kept her eyes, but Chenoworth noticed that as he passed from one point to another she was becoming deeply interested. Finally she asked abruptly to see the fragment to which he had referred. Taking it from his portemonnaie, he handed it to her.

For some time her eyes were bent upon it, while the American's were bent upon her. Evidently there was something in this bit of yellow paper, torn in half, that moved her profoundly. She handed it back to him without remark, but he noticed a slight tremor of her hand as she did so. Presently, evidently nerving herself to something, she asked:

"Mr. Chenoworth, do you intend to look up your ancestry while in England?"

She awaited his reply with suppressed emotion.

"That is my intention," he replied. "But I don't know where to begin."

There was no reply to this. Later Miss Smithson reappeared, and the two young persons went out into the grounds together.

Chenoworth was to return to London the next morning What was his surprise before going to bed to be asked by Mrs. Smithson to remain longer He replied that nothing stood in the way of his doing so, and his departure was deferred. Mrs Smithson's treatment of him seemed to be undergoing a change, though she did not seem to have made up her mind with regard to his attentions to her daughter. On the second day after her interview with him during which he had showed her the fragment she asked him to let her see it again. He did so, and she asked him if he would object to giving her a copy of it He at once complied with her request.

The next day Mrs. Smithson announced that she must go to London to do some shopping She charged her daughter to take good care of the guest during her absence, which was entirely unnecessary, for it was evident that Miss Gladys was as much enamored of Chenoworth as he was with her. The lovers were in a seventh heaven during the mother's absence, which lasted several days.

Chenoworth was puzzled. Why did Mrs. Smithson leave him with her daughter during this interval? Why had she changed in her treatment of him? There was no explanation. On her return the mystery deepened She would not hear of Chenoworth's departure, saying that she was planning some social functions at which she desired his presence.

Chenoworth was beside himself His attentions to Gladys were very noticeable, and her mother was encouraging them. She had no information concerning his standing in America nor as to his income, which, it was evident from his careful expenditures, was not large Why, then, was she giving him every opportunity to win her daughter when that daughter might make a very advantageous match?

Chenoworth was anxious to hunt up the records of his ancestry, and he finally came to do this he must go to London Gladys had told him that he had better go to an office of heraldry. But whenever he proposed to depart Mrs. Smithson objected, and he deferred his going.

And so it was that Chenoworth kept putting off his departure until one evening, while out on the terrace with Gladys, under the moonlight, he told her that he loved her, but he knew that owing to his limited means a marriage with her was impossible

Then they conferred together upon what Mrs. Smithson meant by encouraging this match, but as neither of them knew they simply wondered. It was finally agreed between them that Chenoworth should learn what was in store for them by asking for Gladys's hand.

He approached Mr. Smithson with doubt and fear He was given to understand that if he was acceptable to the daughter he would be acceptable to the parents. This thrilled him, and he went to Gladys with the good news at once. At a subsequent interview he gave Mr Smithson a statement of his financial affairs, to which the gentleman listened with respectful attention, but made no comment. If Chenoworth's mind had not been taken up with love, curiosity would have come in to claim its share of attention.

Chenoworth did not leave the manor house till he departed on his wedding journey. When he returned he was saluted by his mother-in-law and every one else as Sir James. When the first excitement attending the couple's return had worn off Chenoworth was informed of what had been going on during his courtship.

Mrs. Smithson had inherited her estate through the female branch of Chenoworths. She was aware that the heir to the title had two centuries before disappeared in America On receipt of a copy of Chenoworth's fragment she had taken it to a herald office in London, and they had given her the following reading of it when complete:

"At the beginning of the parliamentary wars James Chenoworth, son and heir of Sir Ralph Chenoworth, went out to fight for the king. His brother, Arthur, two years his junior, joined the parliamentary forces. The two brothers were enough alike to be twins. At the end of the war, the king's cause having been lost, James Chenoworth went to America. Arthur returned to his home and succeeded to the title. When the restoration came James Chenoworth had died, leaving a son, John. The sons of James Chenoworth are the rightful heirs to the Chenoworth title and estates."

Mrs. Smithson's action was explained. By taking James Chenoworth for a son-in-law she revived the baronetcy and secured for her daughter the estates which were legally his.

HARVARD IS WEAK IN SPORTS

Harvard, strong in football, track athletics, baseball, rowing and hockey, the major sports (hockey is a major sport at Harvard), makes a poor showing in several of the so-called minor sports, such as swimming, gymnastics, wrestling and basket ball, healthful, worth while forms of competition.

Proficiency at swimming has gone ahead fast in recent years at several colleges, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Penn and College of the City of New York, for instance. Doubtless this is due to those institutions having fine pools, and maybe the backwardness of Harvard in this line of intercollegiate sport is due to shortage of facilities.

The Old Yellow Pitcher

Gave Up a Rich Legacy on Washington's Birthday.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mrs. Drake regarded the tall yellow pitcher with disdainful surprise.

Linnie Harris blushed hotly.

"That is all."

"And you expected something handsome from him—several thousand dollars anyway, didn't you?" she persisted.

"He said I would be well provided for," admitted Linnie faintly. She was feeling very weak after a long illness with pneumonia, and during her absence from the office another girl had taken her position as bookkeeper.

When her illness had reached a critical point her great uncle, Gregory Brown, had died, and instead of sharing in his large estate Linnie had this very morning received her legacy—an ancient and, from a collector's viewpoint, valuable pitcher decorated in commemoration of the death of George Washington.

Linnie always remembered the pitcher. It had stood on the top shelf of the china closet in Uncle Gregory's dining room.

Once when she was a child she had visited Uncle Gregory with her mother. One day in a fit of childish curiosity she had climbed upon a chair and taken down the pitcher.

It slipped from her hands, and as she caught it again it struck the shelf, and a large piece was broken out of the top.

Frightened at the possible consequences of her deed, Linnie had replaced the pitcher, and later when Uncle Gregory, having discovered the damage, accused the trembling child Linnie had first denied it and later made confession.

After that Uncle Gregory gave her little peace of mind.

He persisted in regarding Linnie as a practiced liar, and whenever opportunity presented itself he dinned into her ears the well known story of the youthful George Washington and the cherry tree.

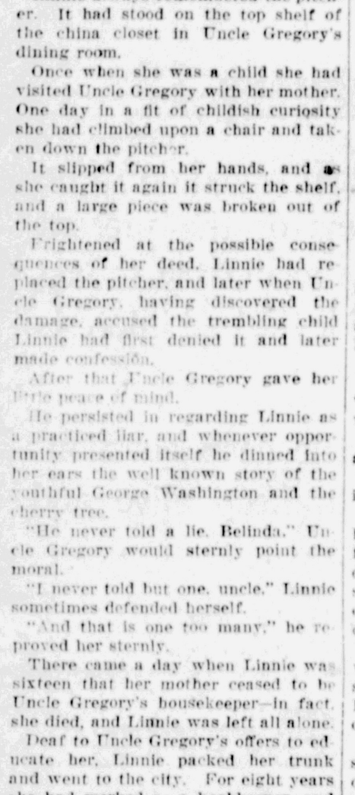

"He never told a lie, Belinda," Uncle Gregory would sternly point the moral.

"I never told but one, uncle," Linnie sometimes defended herself.

"And that is one too many," he reproved her sternly.

There came a day when Linnie was sixteen that her mother ceased to be Uncle Gregory's housekeeper—in fact, she died, and Linnie was left all alone.

Deaf to Uncle Gregory's offers to educate her, Linnie packed her trunk and went to the city. For eight years she had worked as a bookkeeper, and only this long illness had interrupted her.

Now Linnie sat and stared at the maze of clotheslines in the narrow yards below her back window. All her savings had been wiped out. There had been a trained nurse, doctor and medicines, and Mrs. Drake, her landlady, was still unpaid. That $60 loomed like some ghastly shape before her weary eyes.

As soon as they had told her about Uncle Gregory's death Linnie had promised Mrs. Drake her money.

"He told me I would be well provided for," explained Linnie weakly. "I suppose he sent me the pitcher to remind me why I was disinherited."

"What about the pitcher?" asked Mrs. Drake sourly.

Linnie told her haltingly.

"So you lied to him?" sneered the woman.

"I told him the truth afterward."

Mrs. Drake laughed.

"Just as you've told it to me now, miss!" she shrilled.

There was a knock, and the door opened to admit the doctor.

He was a big, breezy man of forty-five, gray eyed and keen and tender of touch.

He looked sharply at Mrs. Drake's smug countenance, then at Linnie, pale and wan, in the big chair.

"You are cheering my patient, Mrs. Drake?" he asked, smiling, with a steely look in his eyes.

When they were alone Dr. Allen sat down beside his patient. He was quivering with anger that the sick girl had been compelled to listen to Mrs. Drake's tirade. Only his skill and careful nursing had brought her back from the gates of death.

"And so you let nurse go?" he asked searchingly.

"I couldn't keep her any longer," she confessed.

"I guessed," he muttered savagely. Then, taking an envelope from his pocket, he said authoritatively: "Please don't pay my bill until my bookkeeper sends it to you. It confuses my accounts when my patients pay as they go!" He smiled humorously at her. "Does she take care of your food?"

"Mrs. Drake? No, she is too busy to bother, and so nurse made arrangements with a diet kitchen near by so that I am provided for. How soon may I go to work?" she asked anxiously.

He frowned.

"You should not go for a year. But you may go the 1st of April if you continue to make good progress."

"The 1st of April, and today is only the 15th of February!" she gasped.

"Have you any people?" he asked.

"No one in the world."

"Take care of yourself and don't let yourself be bothered," he said as he went away.

The next day when Dr. Allen came he dropped some new magazines on the table.

"Tell me about this," evaded the physician, going to the mantelpiece and examining the Washington pitcher with the trained eye of a collector.

Linnie told him the history of the pitcher—of the lie she had told and how Uncle Gregory had punished her by disinheriting her.

"Poor little girl!" muttered the man under his breath.

"And the most absurd thing of all is that my birthday is the 22d of February!" She smiled wistfully.

"Washington's birthday?"

"Yes. Is the pitcher valuable, Dr. Allen?" she asked.

"To a collector—yes."

"Will you accept it, Dr. Allen?" she asked eagerly. "You have been so kind to me—more than money can repay—and I would be so happy to know I had given you pleasure."

He looked at her curiously.

"Be happy, then," he said abruptly. "You have given me pleasure in more ways than one."

"And you will take the pitcher?" asked Linnie joyfully.

"Some day," he said. "Take care of it for me, Miss Harris."

One day Dr. Allen brought some books about the study of old china and furniture. Linnie was enchanted at entering the new field of interest, and she was delighted to discover many old friends among the antiques pictured in the volumes.

In Uncle Gregory's parlor cupboard was a tea set of gold luster—there were some Spode cups, a Leeds bowl, some Royal Worcester vases and treasures of furniture.

"Jove! How I would have enjoyed seeing those things!" cried the doctor one day.

"If you went down to Pendleton I am sure the caretaker would allow you to go over the house," said Linnie.

One crisp February day Dr. Allen took her advice and, escaping from his many patients, he motored down to the Long Island village.

He found the Brown place in charge of a distant cousin of the deceased. She was a dried up little woman with a thin, piping voice and a vivacity of manner that might have been accredited to intense excitement at having been remembered in her kinsman's will.

"And the queerest thing of all is this, Dr. Allen," she twittered as they ate fruit cake and sipped dandelion wine in the warm sitting room, "the queerest thing is that Cousin Gregory's estate has proved to be so small! Just enough to pay the legacies and they only amounted to $10,000. Yet he was said to be worth $50,000 at least. Where is the rest of the money?" She perked her head on one side and nodded mysteriously, "Where is it?"

"Perhaps he spent it all; perhaps he never had as much as people thought."

"And the house and furniture—no provision is made for that—not one single thing except an old mended pitcher which he left to Molly Harris' daughter. I wrapped it and sent it to Linnie myself."

"It is possible Mr. Brown left another will, Mrs. Lane."

"If he did taint in the house," she said shrewdly, "it's been searched from attic to cellar."

"How about the family lawyer?"

Mrs. Lane shook her head.

"Dumb as a stone," she asserted stoutly. "Won't say a word. Says be patient. Patient—humph, I never did admire patience on a monument. Goose on a monument, say I!"

The next day when he called upon Linnie Harris he found her feverish and excited.

"What is the matter?" he asked bluntly.

Linnie flushed and turned away her head. She could not confide her poverty to Dr. Allen, nor would she confess that Mrs. Drake had made another scene over the delinquent room rent.

"It is nothing much," she assured him hastily. "Do tell me about your visit to the old home."

For an hour he regaled her with his recital of Uncle Gregory's treasures.

"Ah, you are cheating your other patients of your time!" reproached Linnie at last.

He blushed like a schoolboy.

"This is my last call," he confessed. "I don't have to hurry."

"I wondered why you always came at 5 o'clock," smiled Linnie.

"Feeling better, aren't you?" He was pulling on furry gloves.

"Yes, indeed. I believe I shall be ready for work by the middle of March," she said coaxingly.

"Perhaps. Let me see. Today is the 21st. Why, tomorrow is your birthday!"

"Also George Washington's," she added gleefully.

"At 1 o'clock I shall call to take you for a drive," he threatened, and without waiting for her answer he vanished.

The morning of the 22d was cold and clear. The sunshine brightened even the gray back yards and the shabby bricks of the surrounding dwellings.

"It is my twenty-fifth birthday, and I shall forget all my troubles," she promised herself as she slowly made her toilet. "I shall forget Mrs. Drake and the fact that I must work night and day to pay her back."

She reveled in the new strength that was hers. Her thin face was filling out, and a lovely color invaded her cheeks. Her eyes were misty blue, and her hair curled in golden tendrils about her broad brow.

Early in the day came a box of roses. Her pulse quickened as she opened the offering.

Mrs. Drake sniffed mournfully as she lingered in the doorway.

"I hope it's all right your receiving handsome presents this way," she droned. "I never had no young ladies in my house who got anything more handsome than carnations. I hope it's all right, Miss Harris."

"I assure you it is, Mrs. Drake," answered Linnie, her eyes very bright in her pale face.

Mrs. Drake sniffed skeptically and dusted the mantel with the corner of her apron.

"Do be careful, Mrs. Drake," cautioned Linnie. "That pitcher belongs to Dr. Allen now"—

Her warning came too late or was purposely unheeded, for the Washington pitcher toppled and fell to the floor with a gentle crashing of its thin old body.

Across the fragments of china and dusty papers which had filled it the two women faced each other.

Linnie tearfully indignant; Mrs. Drake maliciously smiling. "Well, Miss Harris, I can't say I compliment you on coming from a family of good housekeepers. Land, what a mess of dusty rubbish! I noticed it when you unpacked it, and"—

"Please do not touch it," said Linnie through sudden tears, "and be kind enough to leave me alone."

"Hoity-toity!" sniffed the landlady, backing out of the room.

For a long time Linnie surveyed the ruin of the Washington pitcher. "I won't let it spoil my day," she said at last and stooped to pick up the fragments.

It took her a long time, the heirloom had given up so many things. First of all, Uncle Gregory's forgiveness in the form of a later will leaving $40,000 and the homestead, with its contents, to Linnie, who had told a lie and confessed it. And the $40,000 were there, too, in the form of valuable securities.

It was a wonderful day for Linnie Harris.

When Dr. Allen came for her she demurely went, hugging her secret as a surprise for her friend.

But on the ride Dr. Allen asked her to marry him, and Linnie, in the bliss of loving and being loved, forgot to tell him about the contents of the Washington pitcher until the next day when he called to slip an engagement ring on her hand.

Air of Soil Analyzed.

The air of the soil—extracted down to a depth of six inches by means of a special kind of pump—has been found by E. J. Russell and A. Appleyard, English experimenters, to contain more carbon dioxide and less oxygen than atmospheric air. It also shows greater fluctuations in composition, due chiefly to the varying rate in the changes from life process, and apparently quite unconnected with barometric pressure, winds, or any weather conditions.

Pretty Package.

A pot of jam sent to a sick friend was doubly acceptable because of its dainty wrappings. It was inclosed in dark green crepe paper tied with red and green silk threads. Round the neck of the jar the paper stood up in a high frill, and rising above the frill were several leaflike bits of crimson paper, giving the effect of a bright flower among foliage.

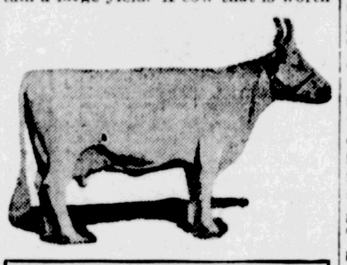

DAIRY and CREAMERY

FEED COWS LIBERALLY.

Milk Flow Cannot Be Maintained on Meager Rations.

It is easier to lose than to gain a milk flow. Near the close of winter a great many farmers and dairymen run short of feed, and as a consequence the cows suffer and the milk flow is checked. Some think they can carry their producing cows along on half rations when home grown feeds are scarce and then bring the cows up again when grass comes. This is very poor policy with the cows, for if they once drop off in their milk flow it is a very difficult matter to bring them back to heavy production.

keeping is worth keeping on full feed, whether it be home grown or purchased. If it does not pay to buy feed for the cows the fault lies with the quality of the cows. Find out which cows are the unprofitable ones and dispose of them, allowing more feed and better care for the remaining ones. The really good cow will not be profitable if she is not given a variety of wholesome and nutritious feeds, with good shelter and regular milking.

Never keep cows and allow them to go hungry through the last part of winter. When the cow is placed on low rations before pastures are ready for use they become weak and lose in flesh. If in this weakened condition they go on new pasture it will be many weeks before they will recover. Don't let up on the heavy winter feeding, for pasture should only be looked upon as a supplementary feed for dairy cows, and at no season should the stall feeding be omitted. If the cows have been allowed to shift for themselves try feeding some grain through the summer season and see if you are not amply repaid for the extra feed. They should have good shelter and abundance of good, fresh water where they can get at it at all times.

BAD ODORS IN MILK.

Certain Feeds When Injudiciously Fed Will Produce Bad Results.

It is possible to increase the milk flow of a cow by good feeding and care before it is firmly established, says Hoard's Dairyman. No system of feeding has yet been brought forth that will increase the quality of milk—that is, in the percentage of fat. It would seem from practical experience that it is possible to ascertain systems of feeding to at least temporarily increase the percentage of fat in milk, but to sustain it throughout the period of lactation we know of no particular kind of feeds to advocate for this purpose.

Where increased flows of milk are desirable, it is very important that the feeder watch his cows closely at the time of freshening and gradually increase their feed so long as they will respond to the increase. When the animal has reached her limit of production it is well then to drop back a little in the amount of meal fed, as it is not feasible under average conditions to feed all the grain a cow will eat in order that her maximum flow of milk may be sustained.

Most any good grown products produce a good flavored milk. There are a few feeds that affect the flavor—that is, what we term an off flavor. The feeding of a large amount of rutabagas or turnips just before milking will invariably give the milk an objectionable odor. Permitting cows to graze on rape pasture will also cause them to produce a strong flavored milk. Even clover pasture will have its effect and so will grass.

Butter Fat Record Broken.

The Holstein cow, Ormsby Jane Segis Aaggie 150934, has broken the record for fat production in the senior four year class of the seven day division by producing in seven consecutive days 703.6 pounds milk containing 34.306 pounds fat. She freshened at the age of four years eleven months nineteen days. Her sire is Ormsby Jane Paul 49641 and her dam is Segis Aaggie Netherland 82613. She was bred by Ernest M. Johnson of New York and is now owned by Oliver Cabana, Jr., of New York.

Feed Freshening Cows.

The cow cannot turn all the nourishment she will get from her food into the milk pail and still have enough to build up her offspring rightly. We need good calves as much as we do good cows.

Object, Matrimony.

"So you don't believe in advertising, eh?" scornfully remarked the up to date business man.

"No, I don't," insisted his sad eyed neighbor. "I got my wife that way."—Judge.

MAKE YOUR MONEY WORK.

And the Lesson the Small Investor Needs to Learn.

The advice of one of the large banks of the country is that every one should invest his surplus, whether large or small, in dividend securities of the best class, whether railroad, real estate or farm mortgages or public utilities, for "To keep money idle is a costly operation."

Let every reader of this article remember that with as little as $5 or $10 he can make first payment on the purchase of a first class $100 bond. Let every reader who has a few hundred dollars to spare put it in a good $500 or $1,000 bond on the partial payment plan, and let it earn something. Five hundred dollars invested in a 6 per cent bond (with the income deposited in a savings bank at 4 per cent) will double itself in twelve years—that is, the $500 will have become $1,000 in that time. This $1,000 at 6 per cent will earn $60 a year or over $1 a week for its possessor. Even at 5 per cent it will double in fifteen years and at 4 per cent in eighteen years.

The lesson the small investor wants to learn is that his money is just as good as that of the larger investor. The former has greater need of being careful because he has less to spare. Learn to be a careful investor. The first thing the careful buyer does if he wants to buy a horse, a cow, a house or a farm, a bond or a share of stock is to make a careful investigation. Schoolboys may swap the jackknives they hold in their closed hands, but grownup men ought to know better. The humblest investor can buy with as great safety as the proudest, for both can deal with the same bankers or brokers in these days when small lots are popular with firms of established character.—Leslie's Weekly.

BIRD ROOSTS.

Safety First as It Is Practiced by the Feathered Tribes.

One of the best ways to prepare for a long journey is to make a short one. So we find that many birds, before they embark on their great air voyage which is to take them from their summer to their winter home, first make daily trips between their sleeping quarters and their feeding grounds.

This is the habit of our robin. Robins raise two and sometimes three families in one season. When the first family leaves the nest early in June it is taken by the father robin to some dense, leafy growth of young trees to pass the night. To this place they return every night. Many other robins, sometimes thousands of them, come to the same woods. Such resorts are known as robin roosts. In flying to and from them the young birds learn how to find their way.

Meanwhile mother robin is patiently sitting on her blue eggs, from which in about two weeks' time another little family will appear. In two weeks more they also will be large enough to leave the nest and can join their brothers and sisters in the roost.

Grackles, or crow blackbirds, have the same habit. But since they have only one family or brood both the parent birds go to the roost with their young.

Sometimes the robins are joined by the grackles and both by the European starlings, which, brought to this country and released in Central park, New York, in 1890, have since become one of the most abundant birds in our middle Atlantic states. Such a roost is visited nightly by many thousands of birds.—Frank M. Chapman in St. Nicholas.

Hungarian Faces.

I have never seen such interesting photographer's show windows as there are in Budapest. Partly this is because the photographers are good, but partly it must lie in the Hungarians themselves—such vivid, interesting, unconventional faces. These people look as if they ought to do the acting and write the music and novels and plays and paint the pictures for all the rest of the world. If they haven't done so it must be because, along with their natural talent, they have this indolence and tendency to flop and not push things through.—Arthur Ruhe in Collier's Weekly.

London's Big Bell.

"Big Ben," the bell in Westminster clock tower, London, is known the world over, but it is incorrectly named. Sir Benjamin Hall, the first commissioner of works, during whose tenure of office the clock was erected, had far less to do with it than Lord Grimthorpe, who designed it and was the moving spirit in its erection. In justice to him it should be known as "Old Grim."—London Mirror.

No Novelty to Her.

Miss Gigglegum (single and romantic)—The shower of soot and ashes from Vesuvius must be an awe inspiring sight. Would you not like to witness it? Mrs. Pottson Pans (married and prosaic)—Oh, I don't know! I've seen my husband take down a stovepipe.—Judge.

Going Down.

Redd—He started out with a $6,000 automobile.

Greene—And what car is he using now?

"A street car."—Yonkers Statesman.

Liked Variety.

Judge—No two of the witnesses tell the same story. Lawyer—I arranged it that way, your honor. I didn't want the trial to be too monotonous for you.—Boston Transcript.

However mean your life is, meet it and live it, not shun it and call it bad names.—Thoreau.

Queer Cattle.

"Regorry, thim shtory writers are the quarest cratures in the world."

"An' phwy so?"

"Shure, an' don't their tales come right out av their heads?"—Boston Transcript.

By La Raconteuse.

Hats are large or small this season and veils are very elaborate. A very fine square meshed veil is shown here, with a cluster of chenille grapes and outline of the grape leaf. It is worn close to the throat and extends over the hat, which is trimmed with glazed grapes and flowers. The colors range from grape green to soft gold tones.

SPONSOR OF PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH IN CALIFORNIA.

Beverly, Cal., Feb. 12.—One of the staunchest advocates of painless childbirth is Mrs. Athol Tucker of this city. Mrs. Tucker is a society matron and is taking steps toward an organization to further painless childbirth in the state of California.

Her baby, Mary Margaret, was born by the so-called "sunrise slumber" method, which involves the use of nitrous-oxide or oxygen-onalgia.

CONVERSATION HOSE LATEST FASHION FAD, "GOOD NIGHT" BOYS.

New York, Feb. 12.—Just a little hitch of a filmy skirt—"Good Night."

Milady's fan used to tell the story—used to be the unrivaled flirting wireless—but now the girls are talking with their feet.

They call them "conversation stockings."

They are designed to start a system of ball room semaphore signals. The swagger hosiery shops of Fifth Avenue have already begun to display the styles, which come to us by way of Palm Beach. At the resort down in alligator land they attained their greatest notoriety and have attracted the most attention.

The conversation stocking carries along the front elevation some word, usually just the opposite to the word that the mate bears.

On the other hand—or the other limb—if the would-be dancing partner doesn't suit the young woman's fancy she lets the skirt fall on the invitation side of the sketch and displays the stocking which means that the young man will have to hunt a friendlier looking stocking.

One of the new designs pictured in New York today shows the words "Thank You" worked along one stocking. The inscription "Howdydo" adorns the other.

Some of them bear the token "Good Night," which is taken as meaning that the man who sees it must move along and peddle his papers. But these inscriptions are only starters. The giddy hosiery carries along pretty nearly all of the animal collection that wandered out into the Caucasus from Mount Ararat when Noah let down the bars.

DRESS FACTORY MOVES TO FERRY ST.

Ex-Mayor Morris Block, president of the Kingston Dress Manufacturing Company, has leased the three story brick building on Ferry street from the Central Hudson Steamboat Company. This building for a number of years was occupied by B. Morss Tremper as a feed store. Extensive alterations will be made to the building including the placing of a number of new windows on the various floors and the installation of fire escapes.

At the present time the dress company is located on the Strand occupying the second floor of the Odd Fellows' building. Business has grown to such an extent, however, the the concern finds itself cramped for room. At the present time twenty-one machines are in operation, but more machines will be installed when the concern moves into its new quarters.

It will probably be several months, however, before the alterations to the building on Ferry street are completed, and the concern will still continue to occupy it's present quarters until the other building is ready.

Life and Character Reading

FEBRUARY 12.

This is a remarkable date in history. The Sun enters the sign of Aquarius. Persons born on this date should cultivate concentration of mind and purpose. They should be much in the outdoor world as they are lovers of beauty and freedom in Nature.

The intuition is keenly developed. It will help this person in business if rightly used. Saturn, the indicator of Destiny, favors those who conquer fear and distrust and people of this birthdate should strive to be self-reliant, courageous and happy.

The happiest marriage will be made with a person born between May 20 and June 21 or between January 20 and February 19.

SOCIETY NOTES.

At a small but very delightful luncheon, given at her home on Albany avenue, Miss Florence D. Grey, the hostess, announcement her engagemet to William R. Kraft of this city.

A bright "Valentine Dance" will be held Monday, February 14 at 8 o'clock, in St. John's parish house. Those who enjoy dancing, especially the dances of yesterday, will enjoy a happy night. The music will be a special feature. Admission, 35 cents. Among other dances will be the waltz, lancers, fireman's reel, polka and the old favorite, the Virginia reel. Special dances by trained experts. Limber up and join your friends.

Judge and Mrs. William D. Cunningham celebrated their twelfth wedding anniversary at their home at Ellenville on Friday night, with seventy friends from Ellenville, Middletown and Kingston. Hearts were played, and prizes were won by Mrs. William P. Glass of this city, and Silas Demarest of Ellenville. The ladies' prize was a handsome gold brooch and the gentlemen's prize was a scarf pin. Refreshments were served and dancing followed. Guests present from Kingston were District Attorney and Mrs. Frederick G. Traver, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Glass and H. LeRoy Lounsbery.

On Wednesday evening a social was held at the home of Miss Mae Sculley. The evening was enjoyed by many appropriate games and solos rendered by Miss Marguerite Sanford and James Flannery. At midnight refreshments were served. The party left at a late hour, voting Miss Sculley a royal entertainer. Those present were the Misses Jennie Healey, Sarah Flannery, Mollie Sanford, Estella Kenny, Mae Sculley, Marguerite Flannery, Bessie Grant, Marguerite Sanford, Kathryn Griffin, Jane Conlon, Mabelle Sears, Marie Lynch, Mamie Maher, James Flannery, Harry Healey, Harold Sanford, Whitfield Sears, Joseph Lynch, Edward Sanford, William Healey, James Kenny and John Sculley.

A double orchestra will be one of the attractions at the Shriners' benefit dance for the benefit of the Industrial Home at the armory on Wednesday evening, February 23. Other arrangements for the dance are progressing finely and there is every indication that it will fully meet the expectations of the public, which has learned from experience that Shriners' dances are all that can be desired in the line of social functions. The committees of ladies who will assist the Shriners are being appointed and they will co-operate heartily with the men in making the benefit ball a success. The advance sale of tickets is already large, and tickets may be obtained from any Shriner, a list of whom has already been published in The Freeman.

The Blue Ribbon Club of this city, under whose auspices a series of successful dances are being held, will hold the second dance of their series in Griffiths's Hall on Hasbrouck avenue this evening. Enough tickets have been disposed of to make the affair a financial success, and it is a certainty that socially the dance will prove to be as successful as those formerly held under the club's auspices. The dance lovers of this vicinity auxiously await the affair held by this prominent organization, as they have always been well attended, and the large gatherings have never failed to thoroughly enjoy themselves. McLean's orchestra of Kingston will play all the latest and popular music. A good time is assureu to all who are fortunate enough to be in attendance. Dancing will start at 8 o'clock and continue until midnight.

On Thursday evening, Miss Catherine Rosa was given a surprise pary at her home on Barmann avenue. During the evening, games of amusement were played; a number of selections both vocal and instrumental were rendered. Refreshments were served at about 11:30 o'clock. Those present were the Misses Genevieve Tooker, Mildred Tooker of Eddyville, Elsie Lebert, Gertrude Lebert, Lillian Van Steenburgh, Jessie Rugar, Ethel and Katherine Garrison, Nora McGrath, Vera Hendrickson, Catherine Rosa, Violet and Evelyn Rose; the Messrs. Benjamin and Clarence Rhymer, Stanley Lebert, Dervey Fallon, Lynn Grant, Harry Anderson, Lewis Shuberg, Carl Thiel, John Remus, Alfred Drautz, Bill and Pete Wenzel, John McGrane and Jim Kiernan. In the wee small hours of the morning the guests departed for their homes voting their hostess a royal entertainer.

An informal dance for the benefit of the worthy poor of our city will be given by the Daughters of Isabella Thursday evening of next week in Pythian Hall. The public is invited to attend this dance and the small fee of twenty-five cents will be charged at the door, for which one may dance until 12 o'clock. These dancing parties which are given every now and then by the Daughters of Isabella are worthy of the public patronage as the charity fund of the society is used solely for charity work among the poor of our own city. Even though conditions among the poor are better than last year, there is still a great need of helping the worthy ones as many are suffering great privations and deserve the attention and help of charitable people. So come all you who are fond of tripping the light fantastic, and spend a few pleasant hours in congenial surroundings, and help along the worthy cause. All will be welcome.

A merry sleigh load party journeyed through Friday night's snow storm to the Grange Hall at Lake Katrine, where a delicious chicken dinner was served by the ladies of the Reformed Church. The party was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd W. Powell of Albany and about forty merry-makers filled two sleighs of Parish's, leaving this city at 6 o'clock. The hearty supper prepared by the ladies was most delicious after the long ride through the snow and wind and lost appetites were regained last night. The ladies of the Reformed Church prepare these suppers for sleighing parties to pay off the mortgage on the Grange Hall and are making a success of the affairs. Following the repast games and dancing were indulged in, both old fashioned games and the new dances being enjoyed. The party was composed of the following: Mr. and Mrs. Floyd W. Powell, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Girard McEntee, Mr. and Mrs. W. Shultis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tremper, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Teague, Mr. and Mrs. William Van Valkenburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Freidell, Mr. and Mrs. L. Jensen, Mr. and Mrs. George Beckwith, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Carter, Mr. and Mrs. George Hinds, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Brenn, the Misses Beulah Tronson, Ethel Mauterstock, Winifred Fuller, Ada Fuller and Ruth Lang, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. A. Mathilda Kirchner and Andrew Lang.

The Sheridan Camp, Sons of Veteran's, dinner at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany, Friday evening, was regarded by the citizens of Albany as one of the most important events held in that town of recent date. The large banqueting hall was superbly draped with American flags, and many of the leading citizens of Albany were among the guests. Particularly impressive were the speeches of Governor Whitman and Judge Clearwater. The governor said that the American people would be false to their traditions and to the men who saved the nation if we do not keep faith; that an adjustment should be made so that what the nation demands of one must be demanded of all; that the weight of responsibility should fall equally upon all, rich and poor, high and low. That national defense in the last analysis rests upon the honesty and integrity of the whole people, and that he was heartily in favor of a compulsory and universal military training. Judge Clearwater said that the situation confronting the country was far more grave than it generally was thought to be; that not since the time of the closing year of President Buchanan's administration had there been so great a diversity of opinion among men prominent in political life as to the necessity of national defence. Without questioning the honesty of the conviction of those who regarded the situation lightly, it should be said and thoroughly understood, that no well informed man who was even superficially acquainted with what was involved in the international relations of the United States but felt that in the twinkling of an eye, as it were, our already strained relations might reach the breaking point, and if that happened the country would be appalled at the reckless disregard and blind optimism of those who since the outbreak of the European conflict had been entrusted with the management of affairs. He thoroughly endorsed Governor Whitman's statement of the necessity of compulsory military training, not only for its own sake, but from the necessity of the cultivation of that self restraint and discipline which largely had ceased to be a potent factor in American life. The judge paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, whom he compared to Timoleon, Turgot, William the Silent and Washington, in character, ability and that sort of prescience which he said was a God given gift, enabling men to foresee the remote consequences of personal and public acts. Both the judge and the governor were heartily cheered and applauded.

Special Sunshine Meeting.

There will be a special meeting of the Sunshine Society held at the home of the president, Mrs. W. Scott Gillespie on Pearl street on Monday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. As matters of importance will be considered, a full attendance is urged.

THE JOINERS.

The Blue Side of the Women's Benefit Association of the Maccabees will hold a package social at the home of the record keeper, Mrs. Cora Wendland, 55 Stephan street, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The first dance of the popular Saturday evening dances will take place in Mechanics' Hall on Henry street tonight and is conducted under the auspices of several young men, members of Charles DeWitt Council, No. 91, J. O. U. A. M. It is the desire of the committee in charge to make this dance a success and others will follow every Saturday evening thereafter. Music will be furnished by Stephen Miller's orchestra.

All Stars Failed to Twinkle.

LONDON'S BRIDGES.

The First of These Historic Structures Named a Juvenile Game.

Can you remember when you were a little tyke and played "London bridge is falling down" during recess or at children's parties when the girls were not too much dressed up? The game always ended with a vigorous pull of the opposing sides, with the result that usually both forces went down in the dust. Did you know that that childish game was one of the genuine antiques and that it could trace its origin to a real historic fact? The first bridge over the Thames, at the headwaters of navigation, about half a mile above the Tower, was so old that the story of its construction is lost in a maze of myths. Its fall, however, is a matter of record. It happened on the 16th of November, 1019, and it was the result of the most devastating storm and the most terrific and sudden flood that London had ever seen.

That first bridge was entirely of wood. It was not rebuilt for almost a century, and the second bridge consisted of stone arches, resting on deep piling. It was forty feet wide and almost a thousand feet long. Houses were built along the bridge, also resting on piling, until the bridge looked like a city street. These buildings were swept away by fire in 1666. In the middle of the bridge was a draw, with a tower, on which were exhibited the heads of Englishmen who were executed for treason against the kings of England. The present London bridge was begun in 1824, a little way above the old one, and it is of such massive construction that there is little danger of its ever "falling down."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TACT AND A SPEECH.

Why Disraeli Changed His Mind About Speaking in French.

"There was one amusing incident in connection with the Berlin congress. One day it was announced that on the morrow Lord Beaconsfield was to address the assembled statesmen and that he would speak in French. Lord Odo Russell, who was a master of tongues, heard this with no little alarm, for it was well known that Lord Beaconsfield's French was very much of the Stratford-atte-Bowe type. Lord Odo, always clever, went to him and adroitly turned the conversation on to the next day's conference. Lord Beaconsfield announced his intention of speaking.

"'In what language do you propose to speak?' asked Lord Odo.

"'In French,' was the answer.

"'I am afraid that will be a very great disappointment to the colleagues,' said Lord Odo. 'You see, they know that they have here in you the greatest living master of English oratory, and of course they are longing to hear you.'

"The great man smiled his pleasure, and the speech was delivered in English. Lord Odo was wont to declare that he never knew whether Lord Beaconsfield took the hint or accepted the compliment."

The Measure.

The ancient judge sat before the scales of worth.

"Bring forth the royal measure!" he cried, and the hurrying slaves poured into the huge pans sacks of golden metal, caskets of sparkling gems until it seemed as if all the wealth of earth were there. Yet the balance never stirred.

"Let the learning of the ages be added," came the order, and tons upon tons of the wisdom of sages, philosophers, scientists and poets was heaped upon the pile. And still the great arm of the scales remained high in air.

"Add now the men of power and high position," said the judge, "and the scale will fall." But all in vain.

"But what is on the other side that outweighs all these?" asked one.

"It is character," said the judge.—Portal.

Walter Was Puzzled.

This is a true story. Little Walter, whose father is a professor in a middle west university, was scrutinizing his parents closely and said: "Father, you have such heavy eyebrows, and mother has hardly any. What are eyebrows for?" The father replied, impromptu, "Why, eyebrows are—er—eyebrows are to keep the perspiration from getting into people's eyes when they work hard." "But, father," protested Walter, "I don't see how that can be, for mother's would need to be many times heavier than yours." And father was lost in thought.—Christian Register.

Over the Mark.

"Does he aim at realism in the stories he writes?"

"He may aim at it, but he doesn't hit within a million miles of it."

"How's that?"

"The hero of his last story is a 'spendthrift Scotchman.'"—Houston Post.

Fortune in Kelp.

The kelp beds of British Columbia are said to be capable of furnishing annually 235,000 tons of potash, which, figured at $50 a ton, would amount to $11,750,000. The iodine obtained, at the rate of $3,375 a ton, would amount to $3,680,000. The total calculated value of these two by-products of kelp (at pre-war prices) would thus amount to $15,000,000 per annum.

KINGSTON, N. Y., FEB. 12, 1916.

The courage manifested in changing one's position in public life is exceeded only by the consequences of such action. In the case of President Wilson and Secretary of War Garrison, the latter could not equal the mental agility of his superior in shifting front to meet the demands of party leaders in Congress and so took advantage of the only other alternative and quit the cabinet. The Hay policy of utilizing the State militia in providing a larger army, with which the President has been flirting, is the rock upon which these administration principals split. The consequence is a situation for which the political resources of the administration are manifestly unprepared. Secretary Garrison stood firmly by his proposition for the continental army plan, a proposition toward which the President appeared to lean in his speeches in New York only last month. On the eve of strengthening that position in a speech before the business men of the country, the War Secretary found himself in hopeless opposition to the President and tendered the resignation that seems destined to make history for the year 1916.

Reading between the lines of the correspondence leading up to the resignation, the singular lack of unity in the cabinet over the Baltimore platform is again conspicuously displayed and the break on the Philippine question is hardly second in importance to that on national defense. Both are sure to be leading issues in the campaign this year and the divergence of opinion thereon among Democratic leaders is generally reflected among the rank and file, to say nothing of militarist and pacifist factions in Congress. The country's faith in the professions of the President that he favors a larger standing army will be shaken as a result of Mr. Garrison's retirement. The refusal of the latter to bow to the demands of expediency and go back upon a policy to which he believed the President, in part at least, committed, shows the former Secretary to be the man of independence and judgment that he has been credited with being. It also indicates Democratic disintegration upon a policy of adequate preparedness, credit and responsibility for which, it now appears, can only be assumed by the Republican minority in Congress.

George W. Perkins, who, as a self constituted regulator of human activities and events, is a gratuitous source of much interesting advice, intimated to the faculty of Vassar College at a dinner the other night that colleges are ten years behind the times. He referred to the advances made in the business and social world within the last decade and suggested the possibility that similar changes had not followed in educational circles where methods of ten years ago might still be in use. Save for that he might just as well have said twenty years. Mr. Perkins is probably accurate in his generalization. Yet it must have been a great temptation to some of the college professors present to extend the discussion to politics where Mr. Perkins shines so preeminently. Here Mr. Perkins stands, steadfast to an ideal of more than a decade ago and his constancy in this respect is more hidebound than any devotion of educators to oldtime notions. What is sauce for the Vassar faculty is sauce for the trustees. Mr. Perkins is one of the latter, a fact which may have saved him from comparisons in the field of progress, in politics as well as education.

If stories of soldiers returning from the front in France are to be believed, and these have the merit of being uncensored, the prime requisite of modern military science is the ability of infantry privates to wield a shovel. We are told that the "rest period," or the time in which soldiers are not engaged in the first line trenches, is devoted almost entirely to digging other trenches. A concrete instance of no small value is thus afforded the United States, especially in these piping time of preparation. The military instruction problem, just now so acute in educational circles, could be solved by the simple expedient of placing shovels in the hands of pupils and on such mornings as this well cleared sidewalks would be in evidence. Meantime the young men would be getting a training in the most practical phase of warfare. In Spring and Summer, these courses could be transferred to farm and garden, or even to public works such as completion of the barge canal. The only trouble with this system of drill is that its very simplicity and usefulness would undoubtedly preclude its adoption in the face of more involved methods advanced by military and other experts.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Crawford—"The janitor of our flat is going to give some kind of an entertainment." "Crabshaw—"For your sake, I hope it will be a housewarming."—Judge.

"A month ago she said she'd never forgive him. And now I hear she has married him." "Yes, carried her revenge to the bitter end."—Detroit Free Press.

Sapleigh—"I believe, you know, I shall try a fish diet for my brain." Miss Keen—"Don't be absurd, Mr. Sapleigh. Fish may stimulate brains, it cannot create them."—Boston Transcript.

"Telephone, sir." "What is it?" "Your wife wants you home at once." "What's the trouble?" "She has a tight gown, can't stoop, and the drip pan under the refrigerator is running over."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"How's prohibition working in Crimson Gulch." "Changed the architecture of the whole town," replied Three-Finger Sam. "A lot o' business houses is bein' built with nothin' but back doors to 'em."—Washington Star.

"Jaggers must be a devoted husband. He told me his wife met with an accident and that he was worried sick for fear she should attempt to be active with her injury too soon." "What was her injury?" "She dislocated her jaw."—Baltimore American.

How it Happened.

Under the able superintendence of the twentieth-century builder, cottages and houses sprang up like mushrooms upon the new estate. But one morning the foreman rushed into his employer's office in a state of intense excitement.

"Please, sir," he gasped, "one of the new houses has fallen down in the night."

"What?" roared the builder. "You mean to tell me that one of my new well built, desirable villa residents has come to grief? How the dickens did that happen?"

"Well, sir," explained the foreman, "as far as I can make out, there was a little mistake. Unfortunately the men took down the scaffolding before they had put up the wall paper."—Tit-Bits.

Nothing More, Then.

A man was walking along the street and he saw a house on fire. He rushed across the way and rang the bell. After some time, a woman, who had proved to be slightly deaf, appeared at the door.

"Madam, your house is on fire."

"What did you say?"

The man began dancing up and down. He pointed above. "I said your house is afire! Flames bursting out! No time to lose!"

"What did you say?"

"House afire! Quick!"

The lady smiled. "Is that all?" she said sweetly.

"Well," replied the man hopelessly, "that's all I can think of just now."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Asking a Great Deal.

The wife of a clergyman in the northern part of Scotland, whose violent antipathy toward his mother-in-law was well known throughout the community, was seriously ill; so seriously, in fact, it was expected that she would not live another 24 hours.

After being told she must soon leave this world, she called her husband to the bedside and spoke her last wishes. To each request concerning the manner of conducting her funeral, the description of her tombstone and the location of her grave, the minister replied solemnly. "Yes, Janie, I'll do that," until she arrived at her last request.

"Weel, Janie, seein' as ye ask me, I'll dae it, but I tell ye nae, it'll spoil the day for me."—New York Tribune.

Gil Anderson, winner of the Astor cup, said at an automobilists' banquet in New York:

"There is nothing more showy and attractive than skillful automobile driving. In fact, I heard the other day about a foreign lady of title who has just jilted one of the Kaiser's most successful generals in order to elope with a Weehawken chauffeur who can drive a sixty-horsepower car with one hand and roll a cigarette with the other!"

Cure Seemed Efficacious.

In a city boarding house some time ago the guests were working away at the evening meal when Mr. Jones broke through the din of clattering knives and forks.

"I was reading of a new cure this morning," he remarked, glancing around the table. "It seems that you take off your shoes and stockings and walk barefooted—"

"What do you think of that cure, Mr. Jones?" eagerly interrupted the landlady, who had also read the story. "Do you really think that walking barefooted through grass will make one strong and healthy?"

"Well," smiled Mr. Jones, strenuously trying to cut a piece of meat, "it seems to have made this beef pretty tough."—Chicago Herald.

There is Still Hope.

"There," said the artist, throwing down his brush and stepping back from the easel. "I consider that the very best thing I ever did." "Never mind," said his friend consolingly. "Perhaps the critics will take a more charitable view of your other stuff."

SCHOOL CHILDREN HEAR MR. TULLAR

Friday afternoon at three-thirty o'clock six hundred people, mostly school children, welcomed Grant Tullar in the large auditorium of the St. James M. E. Church. It was certainly a surprise to see so large a number on a snowy day. The heart of every child and older person present was pleased when the speaker promised to teach them a song about "a loaf of bread." Through different questions as to what bread was made of; what flour came from; who ground the wheat; how the rain and sunshine grew the grain with God's help; the children literally had the substance of the song in prose. So that when the rythmatic form was given, they immediately understood and recited it.

"Back of the loaf the snowy flour,
Back of the flour the mill;
Back of the mill the wheat and shower,
The sun and the Father's will."

Mr. Tullar spoke about "The Boy Without a Fist." Said Mr. Tullar. Your fist consists of the fingers, thumb and hand. You use it to fight with, but you must not fight other boys. Fight life's battles with it."

With the assistance of one of the boys, whose hand was used as a model, the speaker traced on the blackboard the hand with fingers extended.

"The little finger we will use to denote 'play.' When you play, play fair, and you will play fair when you get older. The next finger means 'work.' The average boy or girl likes to work, to do useful things. The middle finger designates 'right.' The index finger, 'study,' and the thumb, 'love.'

"Work and study are almost alike to some boys and girls. Now from this day everyone do your very best in study. Do the right thing.

"The thumb is used to help the other fingers grip, to make them useful; and since the thumb means 'love,' you can easily see that play, work, right and study, can be nothing without love. Love helps us to reach out and grip. Love is what prompted the Father to do what he did, as told in John three, sixteen: 'For God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

WOMAN'S PRAYER MEETING.

In spite of the stormy afternoon Friday, a large number of ladies assembled in the chapel of the First Reformed Church for prayer service.

The meeting opened with song and prayer, and was conducted, to [illegible] usual way," making each thought, each appeal and each desire to do the right thing for others and for yourself, a matter of instinct. These expressions of supplication were interwoven more firmly into our spirits by several solos, sung at just the right moment by Miss Harris.

Mrs. Elsie Pultz was the speaker at the meeting and because of the ladies' meeting, chose a topic featuring a "social function," the time in Bible history when Jesus visited the home of Mary and Martha. As you remember, Martha left her sister to make all the preparations for this noted guest, while she talked with Him.

The thoughts brought out were that all can help Him by attending to our duties. Everything is appreciated. We can bring wholesomeness into our lives, our conversation, our books and our amusements. He will decide what is right, if we ask Him; thus we can act as force with others, compelling imitation.

A Suspicious Old Resident.

Editor of The Freeman:

I have read with great interest the articles appearing in The Freeman, in regard to the great milk agitation. It has always been my privilege, as an American citizen and a resident taxpayer, to have my milk as I wished to have it.

In this age of specializing, I am quite alert in appreciating this "tempest in a teapot." The untenable position that our municipal office holders strive to assume in this matter, leads me to question, are they not working in close harmony with certain private interests.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Feb. 12.—Tex Rickard, the "Man Who Never Lost," finds that very few New Yorkers share his present confidence that he will make money through the staging of the Willard-Moran fracas here on March 8.

"The bout will be a money maker," asserts Rickard, in face of the fact that it will cost him about $90,000 to stage it.

Now that Madison Square Garden has been decided upon definitely as the place for holding the bout, Rickard and Sam McCracken, associated with him in the promotion of the affair, are busily engaged trying to devise ways and means of increasing the seating capacity of the arena.

Hopeful of $30,000 Profit.

Madison Square Garden normally can seat about 9,000. Rickard is hopeful that he can push up that capacity to 12,000 or 13,000 by building a sort of bleachers on the floor, instead of using the chair system.

"If we can seat 12,000 I can see daylight ahead," said Rickard. "That will mean that we will have to average only $7.50 per seat to clear expenses. We are hopeful of averaging $9 per seat and probably $10. If we averaged the latter figure, ours would be a $120,000 house which would give us a profit around $30,000 on our venture."

Rickard has not decided definitely on the prices he will charge, but it is likely that he will demand $50 for the first row of seats circling the ring, $25 for the next five or six rows and then scale down to $10 for the poorest floor seats. The range of prices for the 7,000 gallery seats will be $3, $5, $7.50 and $10, according to present plans.

Tex is Promotion Genius.

Rickard is the man who has startled the pugilistic world on several other occasions by offering huge guarantees to fighters—then startled it a bit by making good.

When he guaranteed Bat Nelson $20,000 and Joe Gans $10,000 for their fight in Goldfield some years ago everyone thought he was what is commonly called a "nut." The opinion became general when he gave Nelson $2,500 and Gans $1,000 extra as a bonus, making the total pay for the fighters $33,500. But Rickard merely smiled at the sneers, staged the bout, and took in $69,715. His own profit in that deal was in the neighborhood of $40,000, including moving picture profits.

In 1910 when Rickard guaranteed a $101,000 purse and later added a $20,000 bonus for the Johnson-Jeffries battle he almost was alone in the belief that the bout would make money for him. He went ahead and built a $30,000 arena in California and then had to abandon it because the law barred the staging of the act there.

Cleared $180,000 at Reno.

Undaunted, and taking the $30,000 loss in a matter of fact way, Rickard went to Reno, built an arena there, incurred heavy expenses, disregarded the scoffing of the "wise men" and put on the fight. The "gate" amounted to $270,775. Deducting all expenses Rickard's net profit was $180,000. Of this amount $110,000 came from moving picture profit and the other $70,000 from the gate receipts.

And now, while the "experts are declaring that Rickard is going to receive a husky financial jolt through this Willard-Moran affair, the "Man Who Never Lost" refuses to be disturbed; refuses to have shaken his superb confidence that he will clear at least $25,000 on the affair.

"I went into this thing with my eyes open," declared Rickard. "I realize that the expenses will be big. I have guaranteed Willard $40,000 and Moran $20,000. It will cost me probably $30,000 more to put on the fight. That makes $90,000. But I took all that into consideration before I went after the fight. I wanted it—and I got it.

"I don't think I paid too high. After is it over there probably will be some people who agree with me."

No Longer Respected.

John W. Hallock, aged 60, was given an indeterminate sentence of from two to seven years in the New Jersey prison Thursday at Sussex, where he pleaded guilty to forging the name of a Westtown, N. Y., man to a note. Up to the time he confessed the forgery, Hallock was a respected citizen.

No Caps and Gowns Wanted.

The Senior Class of Newburgh Academy has voted not to wear caps and gowns at the graduation exercises.

Profits to Go Up in Smoke.

Profits at the Poughkeepsie Automobile Show will be expended at a smoker in March. The exhibit was a great success.

To Preach in Red Hook.

The Rev. Dr. P. N. Chase of this city will preach in Red Hook on Sunday morning and evening.

FIELD OF SPORTS.

Notes of Baseball, Pugilism and Other Lines of Athletics.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 12.—Sam Langford has his revenge. Harry Wills, who outpointed him in two previous encounters, was battered hard by the Boston "Tar Baby." Sam finally stopped his rival in the 19th round with a left hook to the jaw. It was the fourth knockdown Wills received.

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 12.—Carl Morris, stopped Arthur Pelky, Canadian champion, in the fifth round last night. The Oklahoma fighter floored his man twice in the final round before landing the sleep-producing punch.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Although considerably improved from the cold and throat ailment he was suffering from, Jess Willard remained in his rooms today. The champion expects to resume training for his fight with Frank Moran on Monday. He will leave for the east late next week.

New York, Feb. 12.—The historic Hudson will not be the scene this year of the intercollegiate rowing regatta. The race will be rowed on Lake Cayuga. The length of the race, four miles, has been shortened to 3¼ miles. The probable date will be June 24.

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—Chief Bender, former twirler for the Athletics and one of the stars of the American League before he joined the Federals, will come back to his old town—Philadelphia, but he will twirl in the National and not in the American League. The Indian pitcher has accepted terms of Pat Moran, the Philadelphia manager.

SUCCESSFUL BANQUET.

Church of the Redeemer Young Men Give Lincoln Dinner.

The Young Men's Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer gave a Lincoln dinner at the Hotel Stuyvesant Friday evening. Covers were laid for fifty. Nearly every chair was occupied. The banquet is an annual affair with the Brotherhood. This year it was held near Lincoln's birthday and made a patriotic dinenr. The menu was elaborate and served in royal style. Conrad J. Heiselman, president of the Brotherhood, served as toastmaster. He proved himself a real master in that fine art. His remarks were original and clever.

The honored guests of the evening were City Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., and the Rev. Jaques and the Rev. Bermon of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Brininer spoke on "Preparedness," as did almost every other speaker of the evening. One coming in during the progress of speeches might well suppose it a gathering for the purpose of recruiting our army and navy. The remarks of Pastor Bermon were very witty and caused much laughter and applause.

Pastor Snyder was the next speaker. He spoke of some of the qualities of greatness in Lincoln and they "cut loose" on "Preparedness." He said in part: "I am for preparedness. I am not afraid to say that I favor compulsory military training in our public schools, colleges and universities. There is no better training for a young man than the military. Physically, mentaly and morally it makes for efficiency, clearness, alertness, obedience, respect and self-restraint. Our military defense is not commensurate with our position as a world power. We are tempting and inviting foreign invasion from lack of national defense. Our surest and only guarantee of peace is an adequate national military defense. We expect every citizen to pay his tax to run this government. Why should not every honest citizen do his part of military duty? If you are not playing to the gallery and really want to do your duty, now when the county calls, go to our local armory and enroll with Company M. There you will be prepared for preparedness. Meeting and speeches have their place, but if you mean business do the things nearest at hand. If the young men of Kingston do their simple duty, instead of having one company of 100 men, we will have five such companies."

The next speaker was Fred J. Walter. He spoke very ably on loyalty to the church. His remarks were well received. J. Leonard Salzmann was in his usual happy mood and brought forth thunderous applause by his epigrammatic remarks.

Fred M. Snyder aptly illustrated his notions of "Preparedness," by telling a series of good stories in an effective way.

Corporal Edward Geschwinder spoke for Company M and how it stood in relation to preparedness. When he concluded it was time for the last car downtown.

The Brotherhood is to be congratulated on its splendid organization and the efficient way in which they always manage their affairs. The Brotherhood hopes in the near future to give another one of their high class minstrels.

Among those present were: Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., the Rev. J. Frederick Bermon, Fred J. Walter, the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, Prof. Arthur H. Snyder, Frederick M. Snyder, W. Snyder, H. LaTour, Ed. Kolts, H. Rieser, G. Schantz, L. Miers, C. Schwab, F. Lang, Ed. Geschwinder, Wm. Rivenburg, A. Schrader, Fred. DuBois, C. Heiselman, F. Spangenberger, J. L. Messinger, Gus. Kohler, A. A. Kohler, R. B. Van Gaasbeek, F. Weber, H. J. Wieber, Ray Cressler, E. Humphrey, T. Fishang, R. G. Walter, G. C. Kent, L. J. Spangenberger, Wm. Raichle, L. Salzmann, H. Drautz, John Stingle, Messrs. Schleede, Spalt and Kohler.

Trouble in the Sanctum.

There's always a sticky-fingered individual who somehow always finds his way into a newspaper office. His peculiarity is that he takes things that can be of no earthly use to him. Just now he has gone away with all the exchanges, including the paragraphic material.—Nashville Tennesseean.

We believe we should publicly express our appreciation of the prompt and flattering response of many of our citizens and business men of this city, to our efforts in producing a pure and higher grade of milk, cream, butter, ice cream and cheese. We are already assured that our generous expenditure in enlarging our plant and installing the latest and best purifying and pasteurizing apparatus that can be obtained, will be justified by the new business that is already coming to us.

There is no better argument for the pasteurizing of milk in this city than the present epidemic of typhoid fever that our health officer reports he has traced to the raw milk supplied by one of the local milk dealers.

Dr. Herman N. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, has declared over and over again that raw milk is not safe to consume, and that all milk should be properly pasteurized before it is sold.

Not only milk, but our other products, such as cream, butter, ice cream, etc., are to be properly pasteurized, a better grade made, with its purity guaranteed, and no increase in the price. We wish the consumer to fully understand he is dealing directly with the producer.

Twice a week we are shipping to New York city a large consignment of sweet, unsalted butter, that stands next to Borden's pasteurized butter, now selling for 47 cents a pound. When ours is pasteuried, we believe it will be better than the Border product.

The sale of our butter (both sweet and salted,) our health-giving buttermilk and cream cheese has increased over 100 per cent in the past two weeks. Nearly every grocery store handles our products. If you cannot secure them of your grocer call "The Creamery" on the telephone, 788, and we will promptly deliver to you absolutely pure, fresh, sweet food products by special delivery.

Our regular milk and cream routes cover all parts of the city. We will be pleased to deliver to you every day.

THERE Was a Time When "Just As Goods" Talk Was Believed But Not Now.

No more business for substituting dealers, because successful dealers in every line of business are keenly alive to supplying the wants of customers.

Hence, successful dealers have banished from their stores all imitations and "Just as Goods."

Only articles of genuine worth, backed by the manufacturers' guarantee, can have a place in their stores.

When you want soap, perfume, household medicine, paint, varnish, automobile tires, food products, chewing gum, corsets, underwear, shirts, collars, shoes, hair tonic, tooth paste or powders, grape juice or soda fountain drinks, etc.—whatever you want, ASK FOR IT BY NAME of manufacturer or trade-mark brand, and the successful dealer will always hand it out without argument.

Remember, in purchasing goods, always ask for them by Maker's name or Trade Mark Brand. You will be sure to "Get What You Ask For" at the stores of successful dealers.

Beer Long a Popular Drink.

Beer is believed to be one of the most ancient of drinks. Manuscripts written at least 2,000 years before the Christian era show conclusively that even at that primitive period the manufacture of an intoxicating liquor from barley or other grain was extensively carried on in Europe.

GEN. SIR H. SMITH-DORRIEN.

AGAIN QUITS COMMAND.

London, Feb. 12.—Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, ex-Boer leader, has been designated to command the British forces operating against the Germans in East Africa, succeeding Gen. Sir Horace Lockwood Smith-Dorrien.

The new commander assumes the rank of temporary lieutenant-general. He has been minister of the interior, mines and defence of the union of South Africa.

Smith-Dorrien, according to the official announcement, has relinquished command owing to ill health. Up to June last he had been in command of the British second army in Flanders.

It can be stated on excellent authority that the illness which has necessitated the recall of Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien is a recurrence of the nervous breakdown which forced the general last June to leave his command on the French front. The strain of the campaign in France from the Mons to the Marne and the trench warfare of Flanders told so severely on Smith-Dorrien that it became advisable early in the summer to give him a complete rest. Friends who saw him in England say that the cheery soldier had become a morose and silent man who spent his time in lonely walks about his estate avoiding all intercourse with his neighbors. The quiet and rest seemed to have restored him to his usual cheery vigor, and it was the conviction that his normal health had returned that caused him to report to the war office for duty. It was thought that the new field for action in Africa would prevent a possible relapse, but this hope seemed not to have been justified.

LYONSVILLE.

Lyonsville, Feb. 11.—Mrs. Ellsworth Davis has returned to her home after spending a week with her son at Cooks Falls.

Sleighing has been excellent in this vicinity for the past winter. Nearly every one has had a fine time for hauling logs and other heavy things on the sleighs.

Mrs. P. A. Kelder, who has been ill for some time, is getting better. Her many friends will be glad to see her in good health again.

Otto Alexander is a busy man nowadays. He is busy blacksmithing at the home of his mother.

Jacob H. Barley has brought his automobile home from Kingston.

Elisha Trowbridge and son have caught a number of foxes during the past winter.

Taxicab Ran Over Child.

Alice Walker, a five-year-old child, was run over Friday afternoon in Newburgh by a taxicab driven by Albert Sarvis. The child had just alighted from a trolley car. She was removed to a hospital suffering from internal injuries.

The Old Yellow Pitcher

Gave Up a Rich Legacy on Washington's Birthday.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"And you expected something handsome from him—several thousand dollars anyway, didn't you?" she persisted

"He said I would be well provided for," admitted Linnie faintly. She was feeling very weak after a long illness with pneumonia, and during her absence from the office another girl had taken her position as bookkeeper.

When her illness had reached a critical point her great uncle, Gregory Brown, had died and instead of sharing in his large estate Linnie had this very morning received her legacy—an ancient and, from a collector's view point, valuable pitcher decorated in commemoration of the death of George Washington.

Once when she was a child she had visited Uncle Gregory with her mother. One day in a fit of childish curiosity she had climbed upon a chair and taken down the pitcher.

It slipped from her hands, and as she caught it again it struck the shelf, and a large piece was broken out of the top.

Frightened at the possible consequences of her deed Linnie had replaced the pitcher and later when Uncle Gregory, having discovered the damage, accused the trembling child Linnie had first denied it and later made confession.

After [illegible] Uncle Gregory gave her [illegible] forgiveness.

He persisted in regarding Linnie as a practiced liar and whenever opportunity presented itself he dinned into her ears the well known story of the youthful George Washington and the cherry tree.

"I never told but one, uncle," Linnie sometimes defended herself.

"And that is one too many," he reproved her sternly.

There came a day when Linnie was sixteen that her mother ceased to be Uncle Gregory's [illegible] she died and Linnie was left all alone.

Deaf to Uncle Gregory's offers to educate her Linnie packed her trunk and went to the city. For eight years she had worked as a bookkeeper, and

Now Linnie sat and stared at the maze of clotheslines in the narrow yards below her back window. All her savings had been wiped out. There had been a trained nurse doctor and medicines, and Mrs. Drake, her landlady, was still unpaid. That $60 loomed like some ghastly shape before her weary eyes.

As soon as they had told her about Uncle Gregory's death Linnie had promised Mrs. Drake her money.

"He told me I would be well provided for," explained Linnie weakly. "I suppose he sent me the pitcher to remind me why I was disinherited."

"What about the pitcher?" asked Mrs. Drake sourly.

Linnie told her hastily.

"So you lied to him?" sneered the woman.

"I told him the truth afterward."

Mrs. Drake laughed.

"Just as you've told it to me now, miss?" she shrilled.

There was a knock, and the door opened to admit the doctor.

He was a big, breezy man of forty-five, gray eyed and keen and tender of touch.

He looked sharply at Mrs. Drake's smug countenance, then at Linnie, pale and wan, in the big chair.

"You are cheering my patient, Mrs. Drake?" he asked, smiling, with a steely look in his eyes.

When they were alone Dr. Allen sat down beside his patient. He was quivering with anger that the sick girl had been compelled to listen to Mrs. Drake's tirade. Only his skill and careful nursing had brought her back from the gates of death.

"And so you let nurse go?" he asked searchingly.

"I couldn't keep her any longer," she confessed.

"I guessed," he muttered savagely. Then taking an envelope from his pocket, he said authoritatively: "Please don't pay my bill until my bookkeeper sends it to you. It confuses my accounts when my patients pay as they go." He smiled humorously at her. "Does she take care of your food?"

"Mrs. Drake? No, she is too busy to bother, and so nurse made arrangements with a diet kit hen near by so that I am provided for. How soon may I go to work?" she asked anxiously.

He frowned.

"You should not go for a year. But you may go the 1st of April if you continue to make good progress."

"The 1st of April, and today is only the 15th of February!" she gasped.

"Have you any people?" he asked.

"No one in the world."

"Take care of yourself and don't let yourself be bothered," he said as he went away.

The next day when Dr. Allen came he dropped some new magazines on the table.

"Tell me about this," evaded the physician, going to the mantelpiece and examining the Washington pitcher with the trained eye of a collector.

Linnie told him the history of the pitcher—of the lie she had told and how Uncle Gregory had punished her by disinheriting her.

"Poor little girl!" muttered the man under his breath.

"And the most absurd thing of all is that my birthday is the 22d of February!" She smiled wistfully.

"Washington's birthday?"

"Yes. Is the pitcher valuable, Dr. Allen?" she asked.

"To a collector—yes."

"Will you accept it, Dr. Allen?" she asked eagerly. "You have been so kind to me—more than money can repay—and I would be so happy to know I had given you pleasure."

He looked at her curiously.

"Be happy then," he said abruptly. "You have given me pleasure in more ways than one."

"And you will take the pitcher?" asked Linnie joyfully.

"Some day," he said. "Take care of it for me, Miss Harris."

One day Dr. Allen brought some books about the study of old china and furniture. Linnie was enchanted at entering the new field of interest, and she was delighted to discover many old friends among the antiques pictured in the volumes.

In Uncle Gregory's parlor cupboard was a tea set of gold luster—there were some Spode cups, a Leeds bowl, some of furniture.

"How I would have enjoyed seeing these things!" cried the doctor one day.

"If you went down to Pendleton I am sure the caretaker would allow you to go over the house," said Linnie.

One crisp February day Dr. Allen took her advice and, escaping from his many patients, he motored down to the Long Island village.

He found the Brown place in charge of a distant cousin of the deceased. She was a dried up little woman with a thin piping voice and a vivacity of manner that might have been accredited to intense excitement at having been remembered in her kinsman's will.

"And the queerest thing of all is this, Dr. Allen," she twittered as they ate fruit cake and sipped dandelion wine in the warm sitting room, "the queerest thing is that Cousin Gregory's estate has proved to be so small! Just enough to pay the legacies and they only amounted to $10,000. Yet he was said to be worth $50,000 at least. Where is the rest of the money?" She perked her head on one side and nodded mysteriously. "Where is it?"

"Perhaps he spent it all, perhaps he never had as much as people thought."

"And the house and furniture—no provision is made for that, not one single thing except an old mended pitcher which he left to Molly Harris' daughter. I wrapped it and sent it to Linnie myself."

"It is possible Mr. Brown left another will, Mrs. Pipe."

"If he did I'm in the house," she said shrewdly. "It's been searched from attic to cellar.

[illegible] family lawyer."

Mrs. Pipe shook her head.

"Dumb as a stone," she asserted stoutly. "Won't say a word. Says he's patient. Patient, humph! I never did admire patience on a monument. Loose on a monument, say I."

The next day when he called upon Linnie Harris he found her feverish and excited.

"What is the matter?" he asked bluntly.

Linnie flushed and turned away her head. She could not confide her poverty to Dr. Allen nor would she confess that Mrs. Drake had made another scene over the delinquent room rent.

For a while she regaled her with his recital of Uncle Gregory's treasures.

"Ah, you are treating your other patients of your time," reproached Linnie at last.

He blushed like a schoolboy.

"This is my last call," he confessed. "I don't have to hurry."

"I wondered why you always came at 5 o'clock," smiled Linnie.

"Feeling better aren't you?" He was pulling on furry gloves.

"Yes, indeed. I believe I shall be ready for work by the middle of March," she said coaxingly.

"Perhaps. Let me see, today is the 21st. Why, tomorrow is your birthday."

"Also George Washington's," she added gleefully.

"At 1 o'clock I shall call to take you for a drive," he threatened, and without waiting for her answer he vanished.

the gray back yards and the shabby backs of the surrounding dwellings.

"It is my twenty-fifth birthday, and I shall forget all my troubles," she promised herself as she slowly made her toilet. "I shall forget Mrs. Drake and the fact that I must work night and day to pay her back."

She reveled in the new strength that was hers. Her thin face was filling out and a lovely color invaded her cheeks. Her eyes were misty blue, and her hair curled in golden tendrils about her broad brow.

Early in the day came a box of roses. Her pulse quickened as she opened the offering.

Mrs. Drake sniffed mournfully as she lingered in the doorway.

"I hope it's all right about receiving handsome presents this way," she droned. "I never had no young ladies in my house who got anything more handsome than carnations. I hope it's all right, Miss Harris."

"I assure you it is, Mrs. Drake," answered Linnie, her eyes very bright in her pale face.

Mrs. Drake sniffed skeptically and dusted the mantel with the corner of her apron.

"That pitcher belongs to Dr. Allen now."

Her warning came too late or was purposely unheeded, for the Washington pitcher toppled and fell to the floor with a gentle crashing of its thin old body.

Across the fragments of china and dusty papers which had filled it the two women faced each other.

Linnie tearfully indignant, Mrs. Drake maliciously smiling. "Well, Miss Harris, I can't say I compliment you on coming from a family of good housekeepers. Land, what a mess of dusty rubbish! I noticed it when you unpacked it, and —

"Please do not touch it," said Linnie through sudden tears, "and be kind enough to leave me alone."

"Hoity-toity," sniffed the landlady, backing out of the room.

For a long time Linnie surveyed the ruin of the Washington pitcher. "I won't let it spoil my day," she said at last and stooped to pick up the fragments.

It took her a long time, the heirloom had given up so many things. First of all, Uncle Gregory's forgiveness in the form of a later will leaving $40,000 and the homestead, with its contents, to Linnie who had told a lie and confessed it. And the $40,000 were there too, in the form of valuable securities.

It was a wonderful day for Linnie Harris.

But on the ride Dr. Allen asked her to marry him, and Linnie in the bliss of being and being loved forgot to tell him about the contents of the Washington pitcher until the next day when he called to slip an engagement ring on her hand.

Air of Soil Analyzed.

The air of the soil—extracted down to a depth of six inches by means of a special kind of pump—has been found by E. J. Russell and A. Appleyard, English experimenters, to contain more carbon dioxide and less oxygen than atmospheric air. It also shows greater fluctuations in composition, due chiefly to the varying rate in the changes from life process, and apparently quite unconnected with barometric pressure, winds, or any weather conditions.

Pretty Package.

A pot of jam sent to a sick friend was doubly acceptable because of its dainty wrappings. It was inclosed in dark green crepe paper tied with red and green silk threads. Round the neck of the jar the paper stood up in a high frill, and rising above the frill were several leaflike bits of crimson paper, giving the effect of a bright flower among foliage.

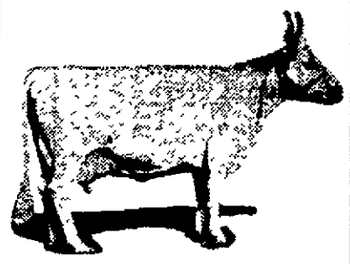

DAIRY and CREAMERY

FEED COWS LIBERALLY.

Milk Flow Cannot Be Maintained on Meager Rations.

It is easier to lose than to gain a milk flow. Near the close of winter a great many farmers and dairymen run short of feed, and as a consequence the cows suffer and the milk flow is checked. Some think they can carry their producing cows along on half rations when home grown feeds are scarce and then bring the cows up again when grass comes. This is very poor policy with the cows, for if they once drop off in their milk flow it is a very difficult matter to bring them back to heavy production.

keeping is worth keeping on full feed, whether it be home grown or purchased. If it does not pay to buy feed for the cows the fault lies with the quality of the cows. Find out which cows are the unprofitable ones and dispose of them, allowing more feed and better care for the remaining ones. The really good cow will not be profitable if she is not given a variety of wholesome and nutritious feeds, with good shelter and regular milking.

Never keep cows and allow them to go hungry through the last part of winter. When the cow is placed on low rations before pastures are ready for use they become weak and lose in flesh. If in this weakened condition they go on new pasture it will be many weeks before they will recover. Don't let up on the heavy winter feeding, for pasture should only be looked upon as a supplementary feed for dairy cows and at no season should the stall feeding be omitted. If the cows have been allowed to shift for themselves try feeding some grain through the summer season and see if you are not amply repaid. They should have good shelter and abundance of good fresh water where they can get at it at all times.

BAD ODORS IN MILK.

It is possible to increase the milk flow of a cow by good feeding and care before it is firmly established, says Hoard's Dairyman. No system of feeding has yet been brought forth that will increase the quality of milk—that is, in the percentage of fat. It would seem from practical experience that it is possible to ascertain systems of feeding to at least temporarily increase the percentage of fat in milk, but to sustain it throughout the period of lactation we know of no particular kind of feeds to advocate for this purpose.

Where increased flows of milk are desirable, it is very important that the feeder watch his cows closely at the time of freshening and gradually increase their feed so long as they will respond to the increase. When the animal has reached her limit of production it is well then to drop back a little in the amount of meal fed as it is not feasible under average conditions to feed all the grain a cow will eat in order that her maximum flow of milk may be sustained.

Most any good farm grown products produce a good flavored milk. There are a few feeds that affect the flavor—that is, what we term an off flavor. The feeding of a large amount of rutabagas or turnips just before milking will invariably give the milk an objectionable odor. Permitting cows to gnaw on rape pasture will also cause them to produce a strong flavored milk. Even clover pasture will have its effect and so will grass.

Butter Fat Record Broken.

The Holstein cow, Ormsby Jane Segis Aaggie 150934, has broken the record for fat production in the senior four year class of the seven day division by producing in seven consecutive days 703.6 pounds milk containing 34.30% pounds fat. She freshened at the age of four years eleven months nineteen days. Her sire is Ormsby Jane Paul 49641 and her dam is Segis Aaggie Netherland 82613. She was bred by Ernest M. Johnson of New York and is now owned by Oliver Cabana, Jr., of New York.

Feed Freshening Cows.

The cow cannot turn all the nourishment she will get from her food into the milk pail and still have enough to build up her offspring rightly. We need good calves as much as we do good cows.

Object, Matrimony.

"So you don't believe in advertising, eh?" scornfully remarked the up to date business man.

"No, I don't," insisted his sad eyed neighbor. "I got my wife that way."—Judge.

MAKE YOUR MONEY WORK.

The advice of one of the large banks of the country is that every one should invest his surplus, whether large or small, in dividend securities of the best class, whether railroad, real estate or farm mortgages or public utilities, for "To keep money idle is a costly operation."

Let every reader of this article remember that with as little as $5 or $10 he can make first payment on the purchase of a first class $100 bond. Let every reader who has a few hundred dollars to spare put it in a good $500 or $1,000 bond on the partial payment plan, and let it earn something. Five hundred dollars invested in a 6 per cent bond (with the income deposited in a savings bank at 4 per cent) will double itself in twelve years—that is, the $500 will have become $1,000 in that time. This $1,000 at 6 per cent will earn $60 a year or over $1 a week for its possessor. Even at 5 per cent it will double in fifteen years and at 4 per cent in eighteen years.

The lesson the small investor wants to learn is that his money is just as good as that of the larger investor. The former has greater need of being careful because he has less to spare. Learn to be a careful investor. The first thing the careful buyer does if he wants to buy a horse, a cow, a house or a farm, a bond or a share of stock is to make a careful investigation. Schoolboys may swap the jackknives they hold in their closed hands, but grownup men ought to know better. The humblest investor can buy with as great safety as the proudest, for both can deal with the same bankers or brokers in these days when small lots are popular with firms of established character.—Leslie's Weekly.

BIRD ROOSTS.

Safety First as It Is Practiced by the Feathered Tribes.

One of the best ways to prepare for a long journey is to make a short one. So we find that many birds, before they embark on their great air voyage which is to take them from their summer to their winter home, first make daily trips between their sleeping quarters and their feeding grounds.

This is the habit of our robin. Robins raise two and sometimes three families in one season. When the first family leaves the nest early in June it is taken by the father robin to some dense, leafy growth of young trees to pass the night. To this place they return every night. Many other robins sometimes thousands of them, come to the same woods. Such resorts are known as robin roosts. In flying to and from them the young birds learn how to find their way.

Meanwhile mother robin is patiently sitting on her blue eggs, from which in about two weeks' time another little family will appear. In two weeks more they also will be large enough to leave the nest and can join their brothers and sisters in the roost.

Sometimes the robins are joined by the grackles and both by the European starlings, which, brought to this country and released in Central park, New York, in 1890 have since become one of the most abundant birds in our middle Atlantic states. Such a roost is visited nightly by many thousands of birds.—Frank M. Chapman in St. Nicholas.

Hungarian Faces.

I have never seen such interesting photographer's show windows as there are in Budapest. Partly this is because the photographers are good, but partly it must lie in the Hungarians themselves—such vivid, interesting, unconventional faces. These people look as if they ought to do the acting and write the music and novels and plays and paint the pictures for all the rest of the world. If they haven't done so it must be because, along with their natural talent, they have this indolence and tendency to flop and not push things through.—Arthur Rube in Collier's Weekly.

London's Big Bell.

"Big Ben," the bell in Westminster clock tower, London, is known the world over, but it is incorrectly named. Sir Benjamin Hall, the first commissioner of works, during whose tenure of office the clock was erected, had far less to do with it than Lord Grimthorpe, who designed it and was the moving spirit in its erection. In justice to him it should be known as "Old Grim."—London Mirror.

No Novelty to Her.

Miss Gigglegum (single and romantic)—The shower of soot and ashes from Vesuvius must be an awe inspiring sight. Would you not like to witness it? Mrs. Pottson Pans (married and prosaic)—Oh, I don't know! I've seen my husband take down a stovepipe.—Judge.

Hats are large or small this season and veils are very elaborate. A very fine square meshed veil is shown here, with a cluster of chenille grapes and outline of the grape leaf. It is worn close to the throat and extends over the hat, which is trimmed with glazed grapes and flowers. The colors range from grape green to soft gold tones.

MRS. ATHOL TUCKER & DAUGHTER

SPONSOR OF PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH IN CALIFORNIA.

Beverly, Cal., Feb. 12.—One of the staunchest advocates of painless childbirth is Mrs. Athol Tucker of this city. Mrs. Tucker is a society matron and is taking steps toward an organization to further painless childbirth in the state of California.

Her baby, Mary Margaret, was born by the so-called "sunrise slumber" method, which involves the use of nitrous-oxide or oxygen-analgia.

Milady's fan used to tell the story—used to be the unrivaled flirting wireless—but now the girls are talking with their feet.

They call them "conversation stockings."

They are designed to start a system of hall room semaphore signals. The swagger hosiery shops of Fifth Avenue have already begun to display the styles, which come to us by way of Palm Beach. At the resort down in alligator land they attained their greatest notoriety and have attracted the most attention.

The conversation stocking carries along the front elevation some word, usually just the opposite to the word that the mate bears.

On the other hand—or the other limb—if the would-be dancing partner doesn't suit the young woman's fancy she lets the skirt fall on the invitation side of the sketch and displays the stocking which means that the young man will have to hunt a friendlier looking stocking.

One of the new designs pictured in New York today shows the words "Thank You" worked along one stocking. The inscription "Howdye" adorns the other.

Some of them bear the token "Good Night," which is taken as meaning that the man who sees it must move along and peddle his papers. But these inscriptions are only starters. The giddy hosiery carries along pretty nearly all of the animal collection that wandered out into the Ark-asus from Mount Ararat when Noah let down the bars.

DRESS FACTORY MOVES TO FERRY ST.

Ex-Mayor Morris Block, president of the Kingston Dress Manufacturing Company, has leased the three story brick building on Ferry street from the Central Hudson Steamboat Company. This building for a number of years was occupied by B. Morse Tremper as a feed store. Extensive alterations will be made to the building including the placing of a number of new windows on the various floors and the installation of fire escapes.

At the present time the dress company is located on the Strand occupying the second floor of the Odd Fellows' building. Business has grown to such an extent, however, the the concern finds itself cramped for room. At the present time twenty-one machines are in operation, but more machines will be installed when the concern moves into its new quarters.

It will probably be several months, however, before the alterations to the building on Ferry street are completed, and the concern will still continue to occupy it's present quarters until the other building is ready.

FEBRUARY 12.

This is a remarkable date in history. The Sun enters the sign of Aquarius. Persons born on this date should cultivate concentration of mind and purpose. They should be much in the outdoor world as they are lovers of beauty and freedom in Nature.

The intuition is keenly developed. It will help this person in business if rightly used. Saturn, the indicator of Destiny, favors those who conquer fear and distrust and people of this birthdate should strive to be self-reliant, courageous and happy.

The happiest marriage will be made with a person born between May 20 and June 21 or between January 20 and February 19.

The Want Ads will find lost articles and will locate efficient help.

SOCIETY NOTES.

At a small but very delightful luncheon, given at her home on Albany avenue, Miss Florence B. Grey, the hostess, announcement her engagement to William R. Kraft of this city.

A bright "Valentine Dance" will be held Monday, February 14 at 8 o'clock, in St. John's parish house. Those who enjoy dancing, especially the dances of yesterday, will enjoy a happy night. The music will be a special feature. Admission, 35 cents. Among other dances will be the waltz, lancers, fireman's reel, polka and the old favorite, the Virginia reel. Special dances by trained experts. Limber up and join your friends.

Judge and Mrs. William D. Cunningham celebrated their twelfth wedding anniversary at their home at Ellenville on Friday night, with seventy friends from Ellenville, Middletown and Kingston. Hearts were played, and prizes were won by Mrs. William P. Glass of this city, and Miss Demarest of Ellenville. The ladies' prize was a handsome gold brooch and the gentlemen's prize was a scarf pin. Refreshments were served and dancing followed. Guests present from Kingston were District Attorney and Mrs. Frederick G. Traver, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Glass and H. LeRoy Lounsbery.

On Wednesday evening a social was held at the home of Miss Mae Sculley. The evening was enjoyed by many appropriate games and solos rendered by Miss Marguerite Sanford and James Flannery. At midnight refreshments were served. The party left at a late hour, voting Miss Sculley a royal entertainer. Those present were the Misses Jennie Healey, Sarah Flannery, Mollie Sanford, Estella Kenny, Mae Sculley, Marguerite Flannery, Bessie Grant, Marguerite Sanford, Kathryn Griffin, Jane Conlon, Mabelle Sears, Marie Lynch, Mamie Maher, James Flannery, Harry Healey, Harold Sanford, Whitfield Sears, Joseph Lynch, Edward Sanford, William Healey, James Kenny and John Sculley.

A double orchestra will be one of the attractions at the Shriners' benefit dance for the benefit of the Industrial Home at the armory on Wednesday evening, February 23. Other arrangements for the dance are progressing finely and there is every indication that it will fully meet the expectations of the public, which has learned from experience that Shriners' dances are all that can be desired in the line of social functions. The committees of ladies who will assist the Shriners are being appointed and they will co-operate heartily with the men in making the benefit ball a success. The advance sale of tickets is already large, and tickets may be obtained from any Shriner, a list of whom has already been published in The Freeman.

The Blue Ribbon Club of this city, under whose auspices a series of successful dances are being held, will hold the second dance of their series in Griffiths's Hall on Hasbrouck avenue this evening. Enough tickets have been disposed of to make the affair a financial success, and it is a certainty that socially the dance will prove to be as successful as those formerly held under the club's auspices. The dance lovers of this vicinity anxiously await the affair held by this prominent organization, as they have always been well attended, and the large gatherings have never failed to thoroughly enjoy themselves. McLean's orchestra of Kingston will play all the latest and popular music. A good time is assured to all who are fortunate enough to be in attendance. Dancing will start at 8 o'clock and continue until midnight.

On Thursday evening, Miss Catherine Rosa was given a surprise pary at her home on Barmann avenue. During the evening, games of amusement were played; a number of selections both vocal and instrumental were rendered. Refreshments were served at about 11:30 o'clock. Those present were the Misses Genevieve Tooker, Mildred Tooker of Eddyville, Elsie Lebert, Gertrude Lebert, Lillian Van Steenburgh, Jessie Rugar, Ethel and Katherine Garrison, Nora McGrath, Vera Hendrickson, Catherine Rosa, Violet and Evelyn Rose; the Messrs. Benjamin and Clarence Rhymer, Stanley Lebert, Dervey Fallon, Lynn Grant, Harry Anderson, Lewis Shuberg, Carl Thiel, John Remus, Alfred Drautz, Bill and Pete Wenzel, John McGrane and Jim Kiernan. In the wee small hours of the morning the guests departed for their homes voting their hostess a royal entertainer.

An informal dance for the benefit of the worthy poor of our city will be given by the Daughters of Isabella Thursday evening of next week in Pythian Hall. The public is invited to attend this dance and the small fee of twenty-five cents will be charged at the door, for which one may dance until 12 o'clock. These dancing parties which are given every now and then by the Daughters of Isabella are worthy of the public patronage as the charity fund of the society is used solely for charity work among the poor of our own city. Even though conditions among the poor are better than last year, there is still a great need of helping the worthy ones as many are suffering great privations and deserve the attention and help of charitable people. So come all you who are fond of tripping the light fantastic, and spend a few pleasant hours in congenial surroundings, and help along the worthy cause. All will be welcome.

A merry sleigh load party journeyed through Friday night's snow storm to the Grange Hall at Lake Katrine, where a delicious chicken dinner was served by the ladies of the Reformed Church. The party was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd W. Powell of Albany and about forty merry-makers filled two sleighs at Parish's, leaving this city at 6 o'clock. The hearty supper prepared by the ladies was most delicious after the long ride through the snow and wind and lost appetites were regained last night. The ladies of the Reformed Church prepare these suppers for sleighing parties to pay off the mortgage on the Grange Hall and are making a success of the affair. Following the repast games and dancing were indulged in, both old fashioned games and the new dances being enjoyed. The party was composed of the following: Mr. and Mrs. Floyd W. Powell, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Girard McEntee, Mr. and Mrs. W. Shultis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tremper, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Teague, Mr. and Mrs. William Van Valkenburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Freidell, Mr. and Mrs. L. Jensen, Mr. and Mrs. George Beckwith, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Carter, Mr. and Mrs. George Hinds, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Brenn, the Misses Beulah Tronson, Ethel Mauterstock, Winifred Fuller, Ada Fuller and Ruth Lang, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. A. Mathilda Kirchner and Andrew Lang.

The Sheridan Camp, Sons of Veteran's, dinner at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany, Friday evening, was regarded by the citizens of Albany as one of the most important events held in that town of recent date. The large banqueting hall was superbly draped with American flags, and many of the leading citizens of Albany were among the guests. Particularly impressive were the speeches of Governor Whitman and Judge Clearwater. The governor said that the American people would be false to their traditions and to the men who saved the nation if we do not keep faith; that an adjustment should be made so that what the nation demands of one must be demanded of all; that the weight of responsibility should fall equally upon all, rich and poor, high and low. That national defense in the last analysis rests upon the honesty and integrity of the whole people, and that he was heartily in favor of a compulsory and universal military training. Judge Clearwater said that the situation confronting the country was far more grave than it generally was thought to be; that not since the time of the closing year of President Buchanan's administration had there been so great a diversity of opinion among men prominent in political life as to the necessity of national defence. Without questioning the honesty of the conviction of those who regarded the situation lightly, it should be said and thoroughly understood, that no well informed man who was even superficially acquainted with what was involved in the international relations of the United States but felt that in the twinkling of an eye, as it were, our already strained relations might reach the breaking point, and if that happened the country would be appalled at the reckless disregard and blind optimism of those who since the outbreak of the European conflict had been entrusted with the management of affairs. He thoroughly endorsed Governor Whitman's statement of the necessity of compulsory military training, not only for its own sake, but from the necessity of the cultivation of that self restraint and discipline which largely had ceased to be a potent factor in American life. The judge paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, whom he compared to Timoleon, Turgot, William the Silent and Washington, in character, ability and that sort of prescience which he said was a God given gift, enabling men to foresee the remote consequences of personal and public acts. Both the judge and the governor were heartily cheered and applauded.

Special Sunshine Meeting.

There will be a special meeting of the Sunshine Society held at the home of the president, Mrs. W. Scott Gillespie on Pearl street on Monday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. As matters of importance will be considered, a full attendance is urged.

THE JOINERS.

The Blue Side of the Women's Benefit Association of the Maccabees will hold a package social at the home of the record keeper, Mrs. Cora Wendland, 55 Stephan street, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The first dance of the popular Saturday evening dances will take place in Mechanics' Hall on Henry street tonight and is conducted under the auspices of several young men, members of Charles DeWitt Council, No. 91, J. O. U. A. M. It is the desire of the committee in charge to make this dance a success and others will follow every Saturday evening thereafter. Music will be furnished by Stephen Miller's orchestra.

All Stars Failed to Twinkle.

The All Star Church Five of this city went down to defeat on Friday evening at Catskill, where they played a team from that place at the Y. M. C. A. The final score was 24 to 19 in favor of Catskill. The game was fast and close throughout. The summary:

Peter T. Minkler died at the home of his son Joshua, on Barclay Heights, Saugerties, Thursday, in the 76th year of his age. The funeral will be held in the Blue Mountain Church, Sunday, at 2 p. m. Rev. J. V. Wemple will officiate.

John J. Murphy, who died on Friday at his home in Port Ewen, is survived by three sisters, Mrs. P. J. Needham, Mrs. James Henry and Miss Catherine Murphy, and one brother, Stephen, and by four children. He was the son of Patrick and Catherine Murphy of Port Ewen.

Loretta, the three-year-old daughter of Harry and Mary Sickler, died on Friday at the family residence, No. 77 Freeman street, Brooklyn. The remains were brought to this city and the funeral will be held from the residence of Frederick Sickler, No. 55 Stuyvesant street, at a date not yet fixed.

John R. Ostrander died this morning at his home, No. 233 West Chestnut street, aged 59 years. He is survived by his wife, two sons, Alexander and Howard Ostrander, and two daughters, Gertrude and Jennie Ostrander, all of this city. The funeral will take place from his late residence on Monday at noon and the interment will be in St. George's cemetery at Newburgh.

Michael Byrnes died at his home, the Maple Grove House, Saugerties, Thursday afternoon, after an illness of some time. He was aged 80 years. Deceased leaves a wife and a number of children, and one brother John. Mr. Byrnes was known to many in the town of Saugerties, he having been a resident there for a long time, and his death will cause much regret.

Miss Emma Baker died at the home of her cousin, Miss Lucinda Hughes of Staatsburg, on Friday, February 4, of pneumonia. She was the daughter of Joel Barlow Baker and Emily Lake, and was a former resident of Highland. A brother, Wells Lake Baker of New York city, and two sisters, Sara Baker of Kingston, and Ida Baker of New York city, survive. The funeral was held on Monday with interment in Highland cemetery.

Sarah T. Deyo, widow of Cyrus DuBois, died Tuesday, at her residence in New Paltz after a short illness, aged 87 years. She is survived by three daughters: Mrs. R. E. Terpening and Miss Sarah E. DuBois of New Paltz, and Mrs. John C. Gillette of Port Ewen; also five sons, Amos of Modena, Andrew of Gardiner, Dr. Cyrus H., of New York, Lawrence of Brooklyn and Herman H., of New Paltz. Funeral services were held today at the home of Mrs. R. E. Terpening, at New Paltz.

LONDON'S BRIDGES.

Can you remember when you were a little tyke and played "London bridge is falling down" during recess or at children's parties when the girls were not too much dressed up? The game always ended with a vigorous pull of the opposing sides, with the result that usually both forces went down in the dust. Did you know that that childish game was one of the genuine antiques and that it could trace its origin to a real historic fact? The first bridge over the Thames at the headwaters of navigation, about half a mile above the Tower, was so old that the story of its construction is lost in a maze of myths. Its fall, however, is a matter of record. It happened on the 16th of November, 1019, and it was the result of the most devastating storm and the most terrific and sudden flood that London had ever seen.

That first bridge was entirely of wood. It was not rebuilt for almost a century, and the second bridge consisted of stone arches, resting on deep piling. It was forty feet wide and almost a thousand feet long. Houses were built along the bridge, also resting on piling, until the bridge looked like a city street. These buildings were swept away by fire in 1666. In the middle of the bridge was a draw, with a tower, on which were exhibited the heads of Englishmen who were executed for treason against the kings of England. The present London bridge was begun in 1824, a little way above the old one, and it is of such massive construction that there is little danger of its ever "falling down."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TACT AND A SPEECH.

Why Disraeli Changed His Mind About Speaking in French.

"There was one amusing incident in connection with the Berlin congress. One day it was announced that on the morrow Lord Beaconsfield was to address the assembled statesmen and that he would speak in French. Lord Odo Russell, who was a master of tongues, heard this with no little alarm, for it was well known that Lord Beaconsfield's French was very much of the Stratford-atte-Bowe type. Lord Odo, always clever, went to him and adroitly turned the conversation on to the next day's conference. Lord Beaconsfield announced his intention of speaking.

"'In what language do you propose to speak?' asked Lord Odo.

"'In French,' was the answer.

"'I am afraid that will be a very great disappointment to the colleagues,' said Lord Odo. 'You see, they know that they have here in you the greatest living master of English oratory, and of course they are longing to hear you.'

"The great man smiled his pleasure and the speech was delivered in English. Lord Odo was wont to declare that he never knew whether Lord Beaconsfield took the hint or accepted the compliment."

The Measure.

The ancient judge sat before the scales of worth.

"Bring forth the royal measure!" he cried, and the hurrying slaves poured into the huge pans sacks of golden metal, caskets of sparkling gems until it seemed as if all the wealth of earth were there. Yet the balance never stirred.

"Let the learning of the ages be added," came the order, and tons upon tons of the wisdom of sages, philosophers, scientists and poets was heaped upon the pile. And still the great arm of the scales remained high in air.

"Add now the men of power and high position," said the judge, "and the scale will fall." But all in vain.

"But what is on the other side that outweighs all these?" asked one.

"It is character," said the judge.—Portal.

Walter Was Puzzled.

This is a true story. Little Walter, whose father is a professor in a middle west university, was scrutinizing his parents closely and said: "Father, you have such heavy eyebrows, and mother has hardly any. What are eyebrows for?" The father replied, impromptu, "Why, eyebrows are—er—eyebrows are to keep the perspiration from getting into people's eyes when they work hard." "But, father," protested Walter, "I don't see how that can be, for mother's would need to be many times heavier than yours." And father was lost in thought.—Christian Register.

Over the Mark.

"Does he aim at realism in the stories he writes?"

"He may aim at it, but he doesn't hit within a million miles of it."

"How's that?"

"The hero of his last story is a 'spend thrift Scotchman.'"—Houston Post.

Fortune in Kelp.

The kelp beds of British Columbia are said to be capable of furnishing annually 235,000 tons of potash, which, figured at $50 a ton, would amount to $11,750,000. The iodine obtained, at the rate of $3,875 a ton, would amount to $3,500,000. The total calculated value of these two by-products of kelp (at pre-war prices) would thus amount to $15,000,000 per annum.

Prosperity of Peace.

Give me the money that has been spent in war, and I will clothe every man, woman and child in an attire of which kings and queens would be proud. I will build a schoolhouse in every valley over the whole earth. I will crown every hillside with a place of worship consecrated to the gospel of peace.—Charles Sumner.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

New York, Feb. 12.—Tex Rickard, the "Man Who Never Lost," finds that very few New Yorkers share his present confidence that he will make money through the staging of the Willard-Moran fracas here on March 8.

"The bout will be a money maker," asserts Rickard, in face of the fact that it will cost him about $90,000 to stage it.

Now that Madison Square Garden has been decided upon definitely as the place for holding the bout, Rickard and Sam McCracken, associated with him in the promotion of the affair, are busily engaged trying to devise ways and means of increasing the seating capacity of the arena.

Hopeful of $30,000 Profit.

Madison Square Garden normally can seat about 9,000. Rickard is hopeful that he can push up that capacity to 12,600 or 13,000 by building a sort of bleachers on the floor, instead of using the chair system.

"If we can seat 12,000 I can see daylight ahead," said Rickard. "That will mean that we will have to average only $7.50 per seat to clear expenses. We are hopeful of averaging $9 per seat and probably $10. If we averaged the latter figure, ours would be a $120,000 house which would give us a profit around $30,000 on our venture."

Rickard has not decided definitely on the prices he will charge, but it is likely that he will demand $50 for the first row of seats circling the ring, $25 for the next five or six rows and then scale down to $10 for the poorest floor seats. The range of prices for the 7,000 gallery seats will be $3, $5, $7.50 and $10, according to present plans.

Tex is Promotion Genius.

Rickard is the man who has startled the pugilistic world on several other occasions by offering huge guarantees to fighters—then startled it a bit by making good.

When he guaranteed Bat Nelson $20,000 and Joe Gans $10,000 for their fight in Goldfield some years ago everyone thought he was what is commonly called a "nut." The opinion became general when he gave Nelson $2,500 and Gans $1,000 extra as a bonus, making the total pay for the fighters $33,500. But Rickard merely smiled at the sneers, staged the bout, and took in $69,715. His own profit in that deal was in the neighborhood of $40,000, including moving picture profits.

In 1910 when Rickard guaranteed a $101,000 purse and later added a $20,000 bonus for the Johnson-Jeffries battle he almost was alone in the belief that the bout would make money for him. He went ahead and built a $30,000 arena in California and then had to abandon it because the law barred the staging of the act there.

Cleared $180,000 at Reno.

Undaunted, and taking the $30,000 loss in a matter of fact way, Rickard went to Reno, built an arena there, incurred heavy expenses, disregarded the scoffing of the "wise men" and put on the fight. The "gate" amounted to $270,775. Deducting all expenses Rickard's net profit was $180,000. Of this amount $110,000 came from moving picture profit and the other $70,000 from the gate receipts.

And now, while the "experts are declaring that Rickard is going to receive a husky financial jolt through this Willard-Moran affair, the "Man Who Never Lost" refuses to be disturbed; refuses to have shaken his superb confidence that he will clear at least $25,000 on the affair.

"I went into this thing with my eyes open," declared Rickard. "I realize that the expenses will be big. I have guaranteed Willard $40,000 and Moran $20,000. It will cost me probably $30,000 more to put on the fight. That makes $90,000. But I took all that into consideration before I went after the fight. I wanted it—and I got it.

"I don't think I paid too high. After is it over there probably will be some people who agree with me."

No Longer Respected.

John W. Hallock, aged 60, was given an indeterminate sentence of from two to seven years in the New Jersey prison Thursday at Sussex, where he pleaded guilty to forging the name of a Westtown, N. Y., man to a note. Up to the time he confessed the forgery, Hallock was a respected citizen.

FIELD OF SPORTS.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 12.—Sam Langford has his revenge. Harry Wills, who outpointed him in two previous encounters, was battered hard by the Boston "Tar Baby." Sam finally stopped his rival in the 19th round with a left hook to the jaw. It was the fourth knockdown Wills received.

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 12.—Carl Morris, stopped Arthur Pelky, Canadian champion, in the fifth round last night. The Oklahoma fighter floored his man twice in the final round before landing the sleep-producing punch.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Although considerably improved from the cold and throat ailment he was suffering from, Jess Willard remained in his rooms today. The champion expects to resume training for his fight with Frank Moran on Monday. He will leave for the east late next week.

New York, Feb. 12.—The historic Hudson will not be the scene this year of the intercollegiate rowing regatta. The race will be rowed on Lake Cayuga. The length of the race, four miles, has been shortened to 3¼ miles. The probable date will be June 24.

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—Chief Bender, former twirler for the Athletics and one of the stars of the American League before he joined the Federals, will come back to his old town—Philadelphia, but he will twirl in the National and not in the American League. The Indian pitcher has accepted terms of Pat Moran, the Philadelphia manager.

SUCCESSFUL BANQUET.

The Young Men's Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer gave a Lincoln dinner at the Hotel Stuyvesant Friday evening. Covers were laid for fifty. Nearly every chair was occupied. The banquet is an annual affair with the Brotherhood. This year it was held near Lincoln's birthday and made a patriotic dinner. The menu was elaborate and served in royal style. Conrad J. Heiselman, president of the Brotherhood, served as toastmaster. He proved himself a real master in that fine art. His remarks were original and clever.

The honored guests of the evening were City Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., and the Rev. Jaques and the Rev. Bermon of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Brinnier spoke on "Preparedness," as did almost every other speaker of the evening. One coming in during the progress of speeches might well suppose it a gathering for the purpose of recruiting our army and navy. The remarks of Pastor Bermon were very witty and caused much laughter and applause.

Pastor Snyder was the next speaker. He spoke of some of the [illegible] of Lincoln and they "cut loose" on "Preparedness." He said in part: "I am for preparedness. I am not afraid to say that I favor compulsory military training in our public schools, colleges and universities. There is no better training for a young man than the military. Physically, mentaly and morally it makes for efficiency, clearness, alertness, obedience, respect and self-restraint. Our military defense is not commensurate with our position as a world power. We are tempting and inviting foreign invasion from lack of national defense. Our surest and only guarantee of peace is an adequate national military defense. We expect every citizen to pay his tax to run this government. Why should not every honest citizen do his part of military duty? If you are not playing to the gallery and really want to do your duty, now when the county calls, go to our local armory and enroll with Company M. There you will be prepared for preparedness. Meeting and speeches have their place, but if you mean business do the things nearest at hand. If the young men of Kingston do their simple duty, instead of having one company of 100 men, we will have five such companies."

The next speaker was Fred J. Walter. He spoke very ably on loyalty to the church. His remarks were well received. J. Leonard Salzmann was in his usual happy mood and brought forth thunderous applause by his epigrammatic remarks.

Fred M. Snyder aptly illustrated his notions of "Preparedness," by telling a series of good stories in an effective way.

Corporal Edward Geschwinder spoke for Company M and how it stood in relation to preparedness. When he concluded it was time for the last car downtown.

The Brotherhood is to be congratulated on its splendid organization and the efficient way in which they always manage their affairs. The Brotherhood hopes in the near future to give another one of their high class minstrels.
